Hoppy Easter

ANNA STENE, a Carmel Middle School student, donned a bunny costume on the first day of spring break Monday to spread cheer, goodwill and a few Easter eggs around downtown Carmel. Here Stene hands out a few goodies to a youngster, Emily Ward of Santa Cruz. As befits a caring Easter bunny, Stene said she did the deed on her own and that it wasn't part of any school-sponsored project. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Modern midwife now a part of miracle of birth

By DAVID LELAND

FOR SOME expectant mothers, the thought of a midwife conjours up the image of a gray-haired, eccentric woman boiling water over a woodburning stove. But in reality, the nurse-midwife has become an integral part of the modern birthing process.

Primarily used in births involving healthy mothers with uncomplicated pregnancies, the nurse-midwife provides specialized care which often includes a more personalized touch than the obstetrician is able to give.

Two direct benefits surface as the mother spends her pregnancy with a nurse-midwife.

The first is that her wants and needs are cared for with longer, more intensified office visits. The visits become more frequent during each three-month period, or trimester.

Secondly, because of the closely-supervised prenatal care, the chances of delivering an unhealthy baby drop drastically.

"Nurse-midwives have shown that good consistent prenatal care is a crucial factor in lowering infant mortality rates," says Anna Lorenz, a Salinas-based nurse-midwife.

One study shows the infant mortality rate for nurse-midwife attended births at only 10 per 1,000, while it was 32 per 1,000 for board certified obstetrician-gynecologists.

There are 16 countries worldwide that have a lower infant-mortality rate than the United States, mainly because of better prenatal care, Lorenz says.

Lorenz sees her clients once a month for the first six months and twice a month up until the last month, when the expectant mother pays a visit once a week.

Each checkup lasts from 30 minutes to one hour and includes discussions centering on growth, body development, nutrition and excercise. Lorenz says that many times a visit to an obstetrician lasts from seven to 10 minutes.

The certified nurse-midwife are not to be confused with the "lay" midwives throughout the county — who may or may not provide adequate care.

Nurse-midwives are registered nurses who have satisfied state standards of education and are given a license to practice. They also carry insurance.

Lorenz also honors MediCal payments, which she calls "cost effective" for the state because of a shorter hospital stay after delivery.

Currently there are three nurse-midwives licensed to practice in Monterey County. Besides Lorenz, Nancy Henke and Cydney Afriat are sanctioned to deliver babies.

But this number is cut by two as the women attempt to find a place to use for the birthing process besides the mother's home.

All except one hospital within the county decline to give nurse-midwives a place on their staff, which brings with it hospital privileges.

•

ONLY LORENZ is allowed admitting privileges at Natividad Medical Center in Salinas, and one reason for this is because her physician husband, Lewis Kruglick, acts as her "backup" in co-signing her orders.

The hospitals' policies leave the other nurse-midwives out in the cold and many expectant mothers with less birthing options.

"I could deliver at home but I don't think it's a safe place (because of possible complications)," said Afriat, who last October was denied hospital privileges by Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula after a three-year battle.

According to Community Hospital spokesman Bob Miskimon, there is "no need" for nurse-midwives at the hospital, which is why Afriat's request was denied.

But Afriat said this seems strange to her because at Kaiser Permanente Hospital in West Los Angeles, where she received her training, there were two full-time nurse-midwives — which is still the case.

A Kaiser hospital offical agrees.

"Midwives deliver non-high-risk pregnancies," says Virginia Nash, assistant medical group administrator. "This frees up the doctor to deliver more complicated births, such as caesareans."

Afriat says that from 1981, when she received her nurse-midwife certificate, to 1983, when she moved to the peninsula to open a private practice, she delivered "several hundred babies" at Kaiser Hospital.

But she was denied hospital privileges and that skill has been put on hold as she works as an OB-GYN nurse practitioner in Monterey and does everything but deliver babies.

"I can do everything before and after," says Afriat, adding that many patients in her office request her to deliver their baby — to no avail.

The other nurse-midwife in the county has also taken an alternate health care job after finding she could not practice midwifery because of the hosptials' attitudes.

Where are priorities?

Dear Editor:

In the past month Mayor Clint Eastwood has made personal attacks against residents who are concerned about the issue of senior citizens housing. I would like to explain to both him and the public why I took the position that I did in support of housing for our seniors.

He said his administration was sympathetic to senior housing and that it has a high priority. In addition, he blamed the former council for the water moratorium and the delays that the housing project has experienced.

Let's take an objective look at Eastwood council action on the critical issue.

Senior Housing

In July of 1986 the Carmel City Council accepted a unanimous report from the General Plan Committee with the following recommendation: "...we see no need to pursue any city action to build, buy or subsidize public housing. What has been negotiated at Dolores and Fifth in the name of affordable housing would benefit only 1/2 of 1 percent of our population, a drop in the bucket if needed, enormously expensive if not."

The recommendation was accepted and forwarded to the Carmel Planning Commission.

Later, coming under increased public pressure to construct the housing, a new project with the Carmel Foundation was begun with increased density on top of a concrete parking garage in our residential zone. In the lead story of the March 5, 1987 Pine Cone the public was informed that the "project has been on hold indefinitely." Bob Priestly, the head of the Carmel Foundation, said the project was for naught. Councilmember Elinor Laiolo commented that "It's just the ways the cards fell."

For those of us who support the General Plan as drafted by the residents of Carmel-by-the-Sea, senior housing remains a top priority for our city. On March 13, 1987 a special meeting was held by the council and, among other project approvals, housing for our senior citizens was just recognized as a priority project by this council.

I believe that this action was motivated by pressure put on Eastwood by the Carmel Pine Cone articles on the need for this housing. Senior housing should not be a political issue. It meets a defined need in our General Plan and it is a winner of a project that the entire community can point to with pride. I hope the council can find the commitment to proceed with the project. I commend reporter David Leland for his revealing article on this subject.

The Water Moratorium

Each citizen was sent a letter from the mayor asking all of us to conserve water. I totally approve of that effort. As residents, I am sure that you agree that water conservation is our mutual responsibility and an urgent need. But, for whom are we conserving water? Again, let's look at council action not words.

Referring again to the special meeting on water allocation, the Eastwood administration recommended nine projects for approval besides senior housing. Three sets of development condominiums, four sets of offices, three sets of apartments, retail shop divisions, the Eastwood project, and a residentail care facility.

This is in addition to the several takeout ice cream stores already approved, the shop divisions currently taking place within the city, second-story expansions, and the granting of liquor bar uses to any restaurant that wants one.

The council says that it is interested in water conservation. You decide if their words merit serious consideration. We are not going to have it both ways. The city used 100 percent of its water allocation in 1986. If these projects were in place today there is no question that we would exceed our allocation. Our water resource is dangerously low and the city council is expanding and developing commercial projects and uses. Their policy is not in the best interests of our community. It is in the best interests of those few favored developers who will profit from the inability of this council to say no.

This council has put itself and the city into a real bind. Instead of recognizing that it was important to stop accepting and processing applications and permits for the commercial district, it directed the planning commision to continue to process requests hoping that they could resolve the water problem in the interim. Now the property owners have rights established by city action and the city risks lawsuit if it attempts to stop the projects.

It is an impossible situation. My anger centers around the fact that developers were allowed to maximize their profits while our seniors were being told that their cards had not fallen right and that their project would have to wait.

The first priority of the community must be the senior housing. Our second priority must be residential lots of record and remodeling. All other projects must wait until our water resources are renewed and an intelligent reserve of 10 percent established.

Limit expansion

Dear Editor:

Carmel is now revising and updating its plan and guidelines for the future.

I believe it is now clear that Carmel's downtown commercial area for some time has been, is now, and — probably increasingly — will continue to be in the future, predominantly visitational (even though also unique) in character. It appears equally clear that the remainder of Carmel has retained, for the most part, its predominantly residential and traditional character.

The pressures of the on-going visitor population in Carmel and its impact, resulting in the growing emergence of the visitational part of Carmel's character, continue to increase and the tendency to expand building up to the limits of the existing permissible available space also continues, in both the commercial and in the residential areas.

In view of all the existing pressures (predominantly economic, but also consisting of the non-profit-oriented demand for housing) toward structural expansion, particularly in the downtown commercial area, and tending to fill the existing open space to the maximum permissible extent, I believe that a new overriding limitation upon this expansion may be needed and should be considered, namely:

Preserve the remaining open space above all existing single-story structures in Carmel-by-the-Sea except under circumstances which would achieve a clearly perceivable architectural enhancement and, additionally, would supply a demonstrable community need.

Other or additional restrictive qualifications toward the further conservation of open space could be formulated and chosen. My major point is that the volume of open space remaining in Carmel, in my opinion, should be built into very, very sparingly, with any further incasement made only under very high and uniquely local standards.

I liked Carmel the way it was, I like the way it is now, and I believe it is probable that I would like the way it will be in the future.

Is black really white?

Dear Editor:

Steve Woolpert made a Reagan-type "black is white" statement when the Pine Cone reporter called to ask Granite Rock Co.'s reaction to the U.S. Supreme Court decision on Pico Blanco last week.

"We're delighted and excited by this decision," he was quoted as saying.

In fact, the issue before the high court was simple when I went to Washington to hear oral arguments in December. Does the California Coastal Commission have a right to insist that an application to mine within the coastal zone comply with state law?

For several years, Granite Rock and its spokesmen had vehemently denied that the Coastal Commission had that right. They spent a lot of money in support of their argument that even if the mining is done in California, the people of California have no right to say anything about the environmental impact of the mining.

The highest court in the land said yes, the state has a right, acting on behalf of the people, to insist that mining applications comply with state law.

But instead of admitting that his family-owned company lost, Woolpert says, "We're delighted." Is black really white?

The Pine Cone story inaccurately said that attorney Jim Heisinger presented arguments for the company before the Supreme Court. He sat in the audience, as I did, but he said nothing to the court.

(Editor's Note: Heisinger was one of three attorneys that presented the case on behalf of Granite Rock Co. The three agreed beforehand that only one of them would present arguments before the court.)

Troubled reading

Dear Editor:

The other night I decided to read a magazine because there was so much bad news in the newspapers.

The first thing I learned was the fact that Americans spend $50 billion dollars a year on cocaine. In 1986 in Dade County, Fla., twice as many addicts died from cocain overdoses as in 1985.

In a large Florida city, 40 percent of the prostitutes are carrying the AIDS virus.

I dropped the magazine and picked up the newspaper. A prominent Republican politician was complaining that some people were trying to stick it in our president's gazoo! I turned the page and read where the government has dumped $20.5 billion for 100 B-1-B bombers which don't work properly and probably won't for years. By that time, they will probably be obsolete.

Where was the good news? The next article described domestic violence in our society. Eight thousand cases reported in San Francisco in 1986. Six thousand reported cases in Oakland last year with the children in many families witnessing the assaults.

The next page told about Jim Bakker's problems and an allegation that another TV preacher had fleeced an ailing, elderly lady out of $97,000 bucks.

That was enough. I turned quickly to what we used to call the "funny papers."

Thank Heaven for Dennis The Menace, Peanuts and Blondie.

A beautiful Easter

Dear Editor:

As I tie the ribbons on my Easter bonnet, I want to thank three people for making this a special springtime:

Tom May, for his clearly considered solution to the Harrison Library annex site.

His Honor, our Mayor Clint Eastwood, for his diplomacy in obtaining a tacit agreement for purchase of the defunct Crocker Bank.

Wells Fargo Bank's president for wanting to help pull our Carmel library out of the quagmire which has stiffled it for so long.

It is going to be a beautiful Easter!

Rainmaker

Dear Editor:

Yesterday, my neighbor walked over and asked why I was washing my car, what with the water shortage and all. I explained to him my theory of "return-on-water-investment." It goes something like this:

Whenever I wash my car, it is guaranteed that we will have rain within the next 24 hours. So, for an investment of 2 to 3 gallons of water, I can single handedly create millions of gallons of rainfall.

Too, I've found I no longer need to use water to water the plants and flowers in the yard, one car wash and within 24 hours, the rains do it for me.

At times, if the weather reporters call for clear skies in the next seven days, if I feel a bit playful and prankish, I can wash my car and make them all appear quite foolish.

Should we, in the Carmel area, really desire to overcome the shortage of water, all I need to do is wash my car weekly. Need 3 to 4 inches of rain by next week?

O.K.! I'll even wax it!

Significant development issues face planners

By NANCY HILLS

A PERMANENT water ordinance, 12 second-story apartments on Dolores Street and the Sands Motel/Simpson's Restaurant design review top the Carmel Planning Commission agenda next week.

The commission at its 4 p.m., Wednesday, April 22 meeting in Carmel City Council Chambers will review a water use ordinance that will replace all existing water ordinances, said staff planner Brian Roseth, and allow completion of all applications that were received by March 13.

It will also consider Ted Leidig's second-story addition of apartments over the Village Corner Restaurant and Atelier Gallerie buildings.

Additionally, design review of the Little family's demolition and reconstruction of their motel and restaurant on the corner of San Carlos Street and Fifth Avenue will continue (see related story this issue).

The water ordinance, if approved by the planning commission, will have its first reading by the city council May 5 and second reading in June. If approved, it will become law in July.

The commission must also decide if implementation of the ordinance would require an environmental impact report.

As now written, the ordinance would allow all projects which are only waiting for their building permits to be completed.

The proposed ordinance will reinstate a moratorium enacted March 13 by the council that stopped the planning department from processing applications for construction or changes in commercial activity that increase Carmel's water use. Applications for vacant lots of record are exempt from the building ban.

The council instituted the moratorium because last year the city exceeded its 1,030.8 acre feet annual water allocation from the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

The March 13 moratorium superseded an urgency ordinance approved in September and reinstated in December. That ordinance directed the planning commission to process projects which increase city water use but not to issue final building permits.

The proposed ordinance moratorium will be effective until the city achieves a 5 percent unused reserve of its annual water allocation. The city's water use has dropped from about 13 acre feet since it topped 100 percent of its allotment last July.

A 5 percent reserve is a change from the five-year goal of a 10 percent reserve, as specified in the urgency ordinance.

Larger projects that will be released through the proposed ordinance include Robert D'Isidoro's three-building two-story office/apartment complex on San Carlos and Fourth Avenue; two condominium projects on Junipero Avenue; Mayor Clint Eastwood's office/retail complex on San Carlos Street near Fifth Avenue; and Ted Leidig's six apartments over the Dansk Building, corner of Ocean Avenue and San Carlos Street.

There are also a number of residential applications waiting to be completed.

All of these projects have at least a use permit from the commission, but completion of the permit process was suspended until the city's water use dropped enough that it complied with the reserve goal or the city's allocation increased.

Any project with an application filed with the city by March 13, 1987 is included as a pending project and will continue through the city permit process.

That would include Leidig's most recent application for 12 second-story apartments. The senior citizen housing project on the corner of Dolores Street and Fifth Avenue was given a prior special exemption and will not be affected by the ordinance.

Construction on vacant lots of record is exempt from any moratorium and may be applied for at any time.

Nine of the pending projects are estimated to increase Carmel's water use by 3.03 acre feet over and above the water consumption of the previous business or use.

A SECOND-STORY addition of 12 apartments to the Village Corner restaurant and the Atelier Gallerie building on the northeast corner of Dolores Street and Sixth Avenue will be reviewed for a use permit and whether it requires an environmental impact report at the Carmel Planning Commission meeting 4:30 p.m., Wednesday, April 22 in city council chambers. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Since some businesses that will be replaced — such as the nursery at Eastwood's project location and the Grunion Run restaurant at D'Isidoro's location — have been closed for a year or more, the total increase of the city's current water consumption when the new projects are completed will be greater than 3.03 acre feet.

The proposed ordinance also will continue the city's conservation program but in conjunction with a water management district's districtwide conservation ordinance now in the works (see related story this issue.)

If approved, the ordinance will also eliminate the city's own internal allocation system which divides the water district allotment among the various residential and commercial zones in Carmel. Water was set aside for the R-4 district, apartments in the commercial zone and the residential district.

Projects such as the R-4 zone and any other such "under-utilized" properties will be first on the list when the 5 percent reserve is achieved, according to Roseth.

IN OTHER business, the commission at 4:30 p.m.:

- Will, as mentioned above, consider Ted Leidig's use permit application to add a second story with 12 apartments over the Village Corner Restaurant and Atelier Gallerie, beginning at northeast corner of Dolores Street and Fifth Avenue.

The commissiom must also determine if an environmental impact report is required.

Leidig recently received a permit for a second-story addition of 3,000 square feet above the Dansk and Hanson Gallery buildings, northwest corner Ocean Avenue and San Carlos Street.

The Dansk building second-story application raised the issue amongst the commissioners about the effect of second stories proliferating in the downtown area. Commission Chairman Ken White expressed disappointment that not one member of the community choose to attend the planning commission meeting to address the issue.

Leidig has another application filed with the city before March 13 for second-story apartments over the Court of the Fountains on Mission Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues.

- Will consider a use permit amendment to allow the sale of hard liquor at Sans Souci restaurant on Lincoln Street between Sixth and Fifth avenues.

Mayors' request for more water for city sparks debate

By NANCY HILLS

IT PRODUCED a spirited debate but not one more drop of water for Carmel.

The Mayor's Select Committee's letter to the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District requesting an additional 100 acre feet of water from the district's drought reserve for Carmel sparked a rapid verbal exchange between board members David Pendergrass (mayor of Sand City) and John Williams.

(Carmel exceeded its annual water allocation from the district and has imposed a moratorium on certain types of building in the city.)

Williams suggested taking the 100 acre feet from Sand City's unused portion of its allocation. Sand City has used only 30 percent of its allocation to date.

The exchange took place after Pendergrass, the select committee's representative on the water board, defended the mayors' request and read a prepared statement, opposing many of the water board's policies and actions.

Pendergrass said he believed that the water district board was "continually speaking on what I believe to be an artificial shortfall" in the water supply, a position taken by representatives of Carmel in the past.

Pendergrass also referred to the district's computer model's indication that there was additional water in the Carmel Valley aquifer.

From recent results of the district water system computer simulation, it appears that during a drought, about 2,500 acre feet more water seeps into the Carmel Valley aquifer than previously thought.

However, members of the district hydrology staff have stated it is unknown what that means for production under those conditions, but it is being studied.

Also, recent studies by consultants hired by the district have indicated that pumping in the Seaside aquifer should be greatly reduced. Those findings are also being reviewed.

Pendergrass objected to a lawsuit filed by Carmel against the water management district's allocation and a district motion for all the jurisdictions to join in the suit against Carmel.

That motion has been set aside by the Monterey Superior Court Judge Richard Silver until basic questions on the lawsuit are answered.

"We don't want the court deciding our water use and land use issues," Pendergrass said.

Carmel, he said, could be "lent" water from the projected yield of pending water supply projects, such as the water reclamation plant currently being negotiated between the Pebble Beach Co. and the water management district. Carmel's 100 acre feet could be deducted from its future share of the water, the letter and Pendergrass suggested.

Pendergrass also referred to comments made earlier in the meeting by Dale Hekhuis, chairman of Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club, as just publically "blowing his horn."

Hekhuis had asked Pendergrass if there was an unknown source of water on the peninsula and whether he would lend the 100 acre feet to Carmel from Sand City's allocation.

Of all the jurisdictions, Sand City has used the least of its allocation. There is 234 acre feet left from its allotment.

Pendergrass had refused to answer Hekhuis's questions, stating "I'm not getting into the argument" but added later that Sand City would be in the same position as Carmel if it gave away its water.

•

BOARD MEMBER Williams was quick to respond to Pendergrass' presentation.

"Over the years, the board has had the position of leaving the allocation system to the cities. That is obviously not working. Since it seems to be the consensus to give Carmel 100 acre feet, I'm prepared to take 100 acre feet from Sand City," he said.

"Is that a threat?" Pendergrass asked. "Do you realize I speak for the Mayor's Select Committee?"

"Yes, I do," Williams said.

"Are you prepared to take the consequences?" Pendergrass asked.

"Yes, I am," Williams replied without hesitation.

"The division in the past has been left to the jurisdictions," but the total water supply drawn from the system has been left to the water district, Board Chairman Dick Heuer said.

"It is a public trust we don't share with the jurisdictions — when to say 'no', " he added. If water is given to Carmel from the reserve it could set a precendent and allow all the jurisdictions to ask for a greater allocation.

A change in the allocation would require an environmental impact report, Heuer said, which the district is preparing to do anyway. But no change could take place until the EIR is finished.

Board member Pat Bernardi said she was "concerned about the idea that we have more water than we say we have."

She stated that only 14,500 acre feet could be delivered to the peninsula during a repeat of the 1976-1977 drought if demand had reached the district's production cap of 20,000 acre feet.

Only in January and February, she added, the district was facing the idea of rationing this summer, and rainfall this year is only 12.5 inches rather than the normal 18 or 19 inches.

"Prior to this evening, I was leaning in favor of this (the mayor's committee) proposal because of programs I thought would be in place. Now I have my doubts (whether they will be completed) because of the good comments of the city of Carmel. There seems to be so many ramifications that now I am unable to state my mind," Board member Nick Lombardo said.

Lombardo was referring to Carmel's statements regarding the water conservation ordinance addressed earlier in the meeting.

After further debate, Pendergrass asked that the request be tabled until he could talk with the other mayors.

•

IN A later interview with The Carmel Pine Cone Pendergrass said "the whole thing leverages on the drought vulnerability."

According to statistics, a repeat of the 1976 and 1977 conditions, he said, is an average of about every 200 years.

Heuer has stated in the past that weather conditions are changing in a manner no one is certain of and that the statistic can be misleading. Drought conditions can happen at any time, such as the numerous "100-year" floods experienced in the early 1900s.

"It's a philosophical difference," Pendergrass said and it is up to the community to decide what risks it wants to take.

Most of the board members, he feels, are "anti-growth" while he is "pro-growth — with land use planning."

Anti-growth does not work when economic factors and environmentalist groups "just tie up everything," he added.

"It's a political tradeoff," Pendergrass said, and depends on what the community wants to risk.

When the political climate changes, such as in Carmel, the philosophy changes.

"The Carmel City Council before the present council — they were anti-growth. I enjoy this (Carmel) council much more," Pendergrass said.

The original idea for the 100 acre feet did not come from him, Pendergrass said, but from Carmel. The city made the same request late last year.

Our water resource is dangerously low and the city council is expanding and developing commercial projects and uses. Their policy is not in the best interests of our community. It is in the best interests of those few favored developers who will profit from the inability of this council to say no.

This council has put itself and the city into a real bind. Instead of recognizing that it was important to stop accepting and processing applications and permits for the commercial district, it directed the planning commision to continue to process requests hoping that they could resolve the water problem in the interim. Now the property owners have rights established by city action and the city risks lawsuit if it attempts to stop the projects.

It is an impossible situation. My anger centers around the fact that developers were allowed to maximize their profits while our seniors were being told that their cards had not fallen right and that their project would have to wait.

The first priority of the community must be the senior housing. Our second priority must be residential lots of record and remodeling. All other projects must wait until our water resources are renewed and an intelligent reserve of 10 percent established.

Limit expansion

Dear Editor:

Carmel is now revising and updating its plan and guidelines for the future.

I believe it is now clear that Carmel's downtown commercial area for some time has been, is now, and — probably increasingly — will continue to be in the future, predominantly visitational (even though also unique) in character. It appears equally clear that the remainder of Carmel has retained, for the most part, its predominantly residential and traditional character.

The pressures of the on-going visitor population in Carmel and its impact, resulting in the growing emergence of the visitational part of Carmel's character, continue to increase and the tendency to expand building up to the limits of the existing permissible available space also continues, in both the commercial and in the residential areas.

In view of all the existing pressures (predominantly economic, but also consisting of the non-profit-oriented demand for housing) toward structural expansion, particularly in the downtown commercial area, and tending to fill the existing open space to the maximum permissible extent, I believe that a new overriding limitation upon this expansion may be needed and should be considered, namely:

Preserve the remaining open space above all existing single-story structures in Carmel-by-the-Sea except under circumstances which would achieve a clearly perceivable architectural enhancement and, additionally, would supply a demonstrable community need.

Other or additional restrictive qualifications toward the further conservation of open space could be formulated and chosen. My major point is that the volume of open space remaining in Carmel, in my opinion, should be built into very, very sparingly, with any further incasement made only under very high and uniquely local standards.

I liked Carmel the way it was, I like the way it is now, and I believe it is probable that I would like the way it will be in the future.

Is black really white?

Dear Editor:

Steve Woolpert made a Reagan-type "black is white" statement when the Pine Cone reporter called to ask Granite Rock Co.'s reaction to the U.S. Supreme Court decision on Pico Blanco last week.

"We're delighted and excited by this decision," he was quoted as saying.

In fact, the issue before the high court was simple when I went to Washington to hear oral arguments in December. Does the California Coastal Commission have a right to insist that an application to mine within the coastal zone comply with state law?

For several years, Granite Rock and its spokesmen had vehemently denied that the Coastal Commission had that right. They spent a lot of money in support of their argument that even if the mining is done in California, the people of California have no right to say anything about the environmental impact of the mining.

The highest court in the land said yes, the state has a right, acting on behalf of the people, to insist that mining applications comply with state law.

But instead of admitting that his family-owned company lost, Woolpert says, "We're delighted." Is black really white?

The Pine Cone story inaccurately said that attorney Jim Heisinger presented arguments for the company before the Supreme Court. He sat in the audience, as I did, but he said nothing to the court.

Troubled reading

Dear Editor:

The other night I decided to read a magazine because there was so much bad news in the newspapers.

The first thing I learned was the fact that Americans spend $50 billion dollars a year on cocaine. In 1986 in Dade County, Fla., twice as many addicts died from cocain overdoses as in 1985.

In a large Florida city, 40 percent of the prostitutes are carrying the AIDS virus.

I dropped the magazine and picked up the newspaper. A prominent Republican politician was complaining that some people were trying to stick it in our president's gazoo! I turned the page and read where the government has dumped $20.5 billion for 100 B-1-B bombers which don't work properly and probably won't for years. By that time, they will probably be obsolete.

Where was the good news? The next article described domestic violence in our society. Eight thousand cases reported in San Francisco in 1986. Six thousand reported cases in Oakland last year with the children in many families witnessing the assaults.

The next page told about Jim Bakker's problems and an allegation that another TV preacher had fleeced an ailing, elderly lady out of $97,000 bucks.

That was enough. I turned quickly to what we used to call the "funny papers."

Thank Heaven for Dennis The Menace, Peanuts and Blondie.

A beautiful Easter

Dear Editor:

As I tie the ribbons on my Easter bonnet, I want to thank three people for making this a special springtime:

Tom May, for his clearly considered solution to the Harrison Library annex site.

His Honor, our Mayor Clint Eastwood, for his diplomacy in obtaining a tacit agreement for purchase of the defunct Crocker Bank.

Wells Fargo Bank's president for wanting to help pull our Carmel library out of the quagmire which has stiffled it for so long.

It is going to be a beautiful Easter!

Rainmaker

Dear Editor:

Yesterday, my neighbor walked over and asked why I was washing my car, what with the water shortage and all. I explained to him my theory of "return-on-water-investment." It goes something like this:

Whenever I wash my car, it is guaranteed that we will have rain within the next 24 hours. So, for an investment of 2 to 3 gallons of water, I can single handedly create millions of gallons of rainfall.

Too, I've found I no longer need to use water to water the plants and flowers in the yard, one car wash and within 24 hours, the rains do it for me.

At times, if the weather reporters call for clear skies in the next seven days, if I feel a bit playful and prankish, I can wash my car and make them all appear quite foolish.

Should we, in the Carmel area, really desire to overcome the shortage of water, all I need to do is wash my car weekly. Need 3 to 4 inches of rain by next week?

O.K.! I'll even wax it!

Significant development issues face planners

By NANCY HILLS

A PERMANENT water ordinance, 12 second-story apartments on Dolores Street and the Sands Motel/Simpson's Restaurant design review top the Carmel Planning Commission agenda next week.

The commission at its 4 p.m., Wednesday, April 22 meeting in Carmel City Council Chambers will review a water use ordinance that will replace all existing water ordinances, said staff planner Brian Roseth, and allow completion of all applications that were received by March 13.

It will also consider Ted Leidig's second-story addition of apartments over the Village Corner Restaurant and Atelier Gallerie buildings.

Additionally, design review of the Little family's demolition and reconstruction of their motel and restaurant on the corner of San Carlos Street and Fifth Avenue will continue (see related story this issue).

The water ordinance, if approved by the planning commission, will have its first reading by the city council May 5 and second reading in June. If approved, it will become law in July.

The commission must also decide if implementation of the ordinance would require an environmental impact report.

As now written, the ordinance would allow all projects which are only waiting for their building permits to be completed.

The proposed ordinance will reinstate a moratorium enacted March 13 by the council that stopped the planning department from processing applications for construction or changes in commercial activity that increase Carmel's water use. Applications for vacant lots of record are exempt from the building ban.

The council instituted the moratorium because last year the city exceeded its 1,030.8 acre feet annual water allocation from the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

The March 13 moratorium superseded an urgency ordinance approved in September and reinstated in December. That ordinance directed the planning commission to process projects which increase city water use but not to issue final building permits.

The proposed ordinance moratorium will be effective until the city achieves a 5 percent unused reserve of its annual water allocation. The city's water use has dropped from about 13 acre feet since it topped 100 percent of its allotment last July.

A 5 percent reserve is a change from the five-year goal of a 10 percent reserve, as specified in the urgency ordinance.

Larger projects that will be released through the proposed ordinance include Robert D'Isidoro's three-building two-story office/apartment complex on San Carlos and Fourth Avenue; two condominium projects on Junipero Avenue; Mayor Clint Eastwood's office/retail complex on San Carlos Street near Fifth Avenue; and Ted Leidig's six apartments over the Dansk Building, corner of Ocean Avenue and San Carlos Street.

There are also a number of residential applications waiting to be completed.

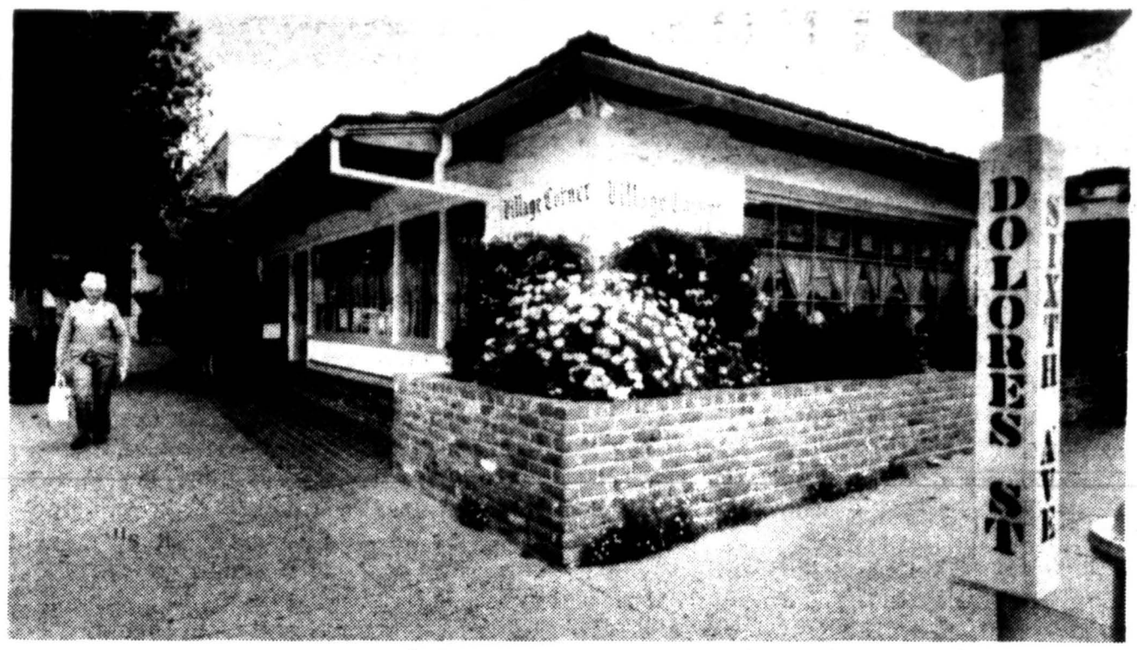
All of these projects have at least a use permit from the commission, but completion of the permit process was suspended until the city's water use dropped enough that it complied with the reserve goal or the city's allocation increased.

Any project with an application filed with the city by March 13, 1987 is included as a pending project and will continue through the city permit process.

That would include Leidig's most recent application for 12 second-story apartments. The senior citizen housing project on the corner of Dolores Street and Fifth Avenue was given a prior special exemption and will not be affected by the ordinance.

Construction on vacant lots of record is exempt from any moratorium and may be applied for at any time.

Nine of the pending projects are estimated to increase Carmel's water use by 3.03 acre feet over and above the water consumption of the previous business or use.



A SECOND-STORY addition of 12 apartments to the Village Corner restaurant and the Atelier Gallerie building on the northeast corner of Dolores Street and Sixth Avenue will be reviewed for a use permit and whether it requires an environmental impact report at the Carmel Planning Commission meeting 4:30 p.m., Wednesday, April 22 in city council chambers. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Since some businesses that will be replaced — such as the nursery at Eastwood's project location and the Grunion Run restaurant at D'Isidoro's location — have been closed for a year or more, the total increase of the city's current water consumption when the new projects are completed will be greater than 3.03 acre feet.

The proposed ordinance also will continue the city's conservation program but in conjunction with a water management district's districtwide conservation ordinance now in the works (see related story this issue.)

If approved, the ordinance will also eliminate the city's own internal allocation system which divides the water district allotment among the various residential and commercial zones in Carmel. Water was set aside for the R-4 district, apartments in the commercial zone and the residential district.

Projects such as the R-4 zone and any other such "under-utilized" properties will be first on the list when the 5 percent reserve is achieved, according to Roseth.

IN OTHER business, the commission at 4:30 p.m.:

- Will, as mentioned above, consider Ted Leidig's use permit application to add a second story with 12 apartments over the Village Corner Restaurant and Atelier Gallerie, beginning at northeast corner of Dolores Street and Fifth Avenue.

The commissiom must also determine if an environmental impact report is required.

Leidig recently received a permit for a second-story addition of 3,000 square feet above the Dansk and Hanson Gallery buildings, northwest corner Ocean Avenue and San Carlos Street.

The Dansk building second-story application raised the issue amongst the commissioners about the effect of second stories proliferating in the downtown area. Commission Chairman Ken White expressed disappointment that not one member of the community choose to attend the planning commission meeting to address the issue.

Leidig has another application filed with the city before March 13 for second-story apartments over the Court of the Fountains on Mission Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues.

- Will consider a use permit amendment to allow the sale of hard liquor at Sans Souci restaurant on Lincoln Street between Sixth and Fifth avenues.

Mayors' request for more water for city sparks debate

By NANCY HILLS

IT PRODUCED a spirited debate but not one more drop of water for Carmel.

The Mayor's Select Committee's letter to the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District requesting an additional 100 acre feet of water from the district's drought reserve for Carmel sparked a rapid verbal exchange between board members David Pendergrass (mayor of Sand City) and John Williams.

(Carmel exceeded its annual water allocation from the district and has imposed a moratorium on certain types of building in the city.)

Williams suggested taking the 100 acre feet from Sand City's unused portion of its allocation. Sand City has used only 30 percent of its allocation to date.

The exchange took place after Pendergrass, the select committee's representative on the water board, defended the mayors' request and read a prepared statement, opposing many of the water board's policies and actions.

Pendergrass said he believed that the water district board was "continually speaking on what I believe to be an artificial shortfall" in the water supply, a position taken by representatives of Carmel in the past.

Pendergrass also referred to the district's computer model's indication that there was additional water in the Carmel Valley aquifer.

From recent results of the district water system computer simulation, it appears that during a drought, about 2,500 acre feet more water seeps into the Carmel Valley aquifer than previously thought.

However, members of the district hydrology staff have stated it is unknown what that means for production under those conditions, but it is being studied.

Also, recent studies by consultants hired by the district have indicated that pumping in the Seaside aquifer should be greatly reduced. Those findings are also being reviewed.

Pendergrass objected to a lawsuit filed by Carmel against the water management district's allocation and a district motion for all the jurisdictions to join in the suit against Carmel.

That motion has been set aside by the Monterey Superior Court Judge Richard Silver until basic questions on the lawsuit are answered.

"We don't want the court deciding our water use and land use issues," Pendergrass said.

Carmel, he said, could be "lent" water from the projected yield of pending water supply projects, such as the water reclamation plant currently being negotiated between the Pebble Beach Co. and the water management district. Carmel's 100 acre feet could be deducted from its future share of the water, the letter and Pendergrass suggested.

Pendergrass also referred to comments made earlier in the meeting by Dale Hekhuis, chairman of Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club, as just publically "blowing his horn."

Hekhuis had asked Pendergrass if there was an unknown source of water on the peninsula and whether he would lend the 100 acre feet to Carmel from Sand City's allocation.

Of all the jurisdictions, Sand City has used the least of its allocation. There is 234 acre feet left from its allotment.

Pendergrass had refused to answer Hekhuis's questions, stating "I'm not getting into the argument" but added later that Sand City would be in the same position as Carmel if it gave away its water.

•

BOARD MEMBER Williams was quick to respond to Pendergrass' presentation.

"Over the years, the board has had the position of leaving the allocation system to the cities. That is obviously not working. Since it seems to be the consensus to give Carmel 100 acre feet, I'm prepared to take 100 acre feet from Sand City," he said.

"Is that a threat?" Pendergrass asked. "Do you realize I speak for the Mayor's Select Committee?"

"Yes, I do," Williams said.

"Are you prepared to take the consequences?" Pendergrass asked.

"Yes, I am," Williams replied without hesitation.

"The division in the past has been left to the jurisdictions," but the total water supply drawn from the system has been left to the water district, Board Chairman Dick Heuer said.

"It is a public trust we don't share with the jurisdictions — when to say 'no'," he added. If water is given to Carmel from the reserve it could set a precendent and allow all the jurisdictions to ask for a greater allocation.

A change in the allocation would require an environmental impact report, Heuer said, which the district is preparing to do anyway. But no change could take place until the EIR is finished.

Board member Pat Bernardi said she was "concerned about the idea that we have more water than we say we have."

She stated that only 14,500 acre feet could be delivered to the peninsula during a repeat of the 1976-1977 drought if demand had reached the district's production cap of 20,000 acre feet.

Only in January and February, she added, the district was facing the idea of rationing this summer, and rainfall this year is only 12.5 inches rather than the normal 18 or 19 inches.

"Prior to this evening, I was leaning in favor of this (the mayor's committee) proposal because of programs I thought would be in place. Now I have my doubts (whether they will be completed) because of the good comments of the city of Carmel. There seems to be so many ramifications that now I am unable to state my mind," Board member Nick Lombardo said.

Lombardo was referring to Carmel's statements regarding the water conservation ordinance addressed earlier in the meeting.

After further debate, Pendergrass asked that the request be tabled until he could talk with the other mayors.

•

IN A later interview with The Carmel Pine Cone Pendergrass said "the whole thing leverages on the drought vulnerability."

According to statistics, a repeat of the 1976 and 1977 conditions, he said, is an average of about every 200 years.

Heuer has stated in the past that weather conditions are changing in a manner no one is certain of and that the statistic can be misleading. Drought conditions can happen at any time, such as the numerous "100-year" floods experienced in the early 1900s.

"It's a philosophical difference," Pendergrass said and it is up to the community to decide what risks it wants to take.

Most of the board members, he feels, are "anti-growth" while he is "pro-growth — with land use planning."

Anti-growth does not work when economic factors and environmentalist groups "just tie up everything," he added.

"It's a political tradeoff," Pendergrass said, and depends on what the community wants to risk.

When the political climate changes, such as in Carmel, the philosophy changes.

"The Carmel City Council before the present council — they were anti-growth. I enjoy this (Carmel) council much more," Pendergrass said.

The original idea for the 100 acre feet did not come from him, Pendergrass said, but from Carmel. The city made the same request late last year.

Midwives can be integral part of birthing process of the county Health Department in Salinas, advising indigent mothers on prenatal care.

While some people believe hospitals are blocking the midwives entry because of doctor distrust in the midwife's skills, Kaiser Hospital's Nash says there should be no reason for the two not working together.

"I don't know why a midwife would inhibit a doctor," she says. "They're (midwives) there to help. It's really an extension of the physician."

•

SO, WHILE the other nurse-midwives in the county occupy their time practicing health care other than child delivery, Lorenz's practice slowly grows larger.

Lorenz's Salinas office has the look of the average obstetrican's quarters, replete with pink walls, baby pictures on the walls and stuffed animals tossed about.

Of the 6,341 babies delivered within the county in 1986, Lorenz was responsible for bringing 40 of them into the world.

"Most of my clients are young and just getting started," Lorenz says. "They want to have a safe birth and maintain the rights in the decision making."

Lorenz charges a flat $1,200 for the nine-month package. And, while she does accept insurance, she asks that clients pay in advance. They are reimbursed by the insurance company when the bill is submitted upon delivery of the baby.

No longer are parents convinced that childbirth is equivalent to surgery. They want to rid themselves of the cold atmosphere of the operating room, which is another reason some mothers chose Lorenz.

"I feel I should be able to have my baby and come home," says Leah Hodges, who has signed on with Lorenz for her second child. "I don't want the nurse to take control over my life."

Both Hodges and Louise Riddell-Kaufman, who will have her baby delivered in seven weeks by Lorenz, say they fear they could have ended up having a caesarean birth while delivering their baby if they followed the traditional route.

The current rate for caesarean section while giving birth at Community Hospital, for example, is 33 percent, according to Health Care Associates' Carol Erickson.

Erickson said her firm gives birth consultation and keeps track of which doctors and hospitals are acting with the mother's best wishes in mind.

"Birth has become quite technologized," says Erickson. "We set up the problems (for caesarean birth)."

Between the intravenous solutions, medications and flat-on-her-back position the woman is forced to lie in, it is no wonder there are complications, says Erickson.

Erickson says lying down is the worst way to give the woman a chance to push when delivering. Instead, the mother should "sit up, walk around or stand in the shower."

For Hodges' first birth nine years ago, she went with the traditional method. "At the time I was young and had less information," she says.

Hodges will deliver her child in the Alternative Birth Room at Natividad hospital. This birth room has a bedroom-type ambiance and the patient goes through labor, delivers and recovers in the same room.

After "labor sitting" — spending the entire labor giving support and acting as a patient's advocate — Lorenz said if a mother has supervision she can go home as soon as six hours after completing delivery.

Victims' rights groups prepared for memorial week

By DAVID LELAND

THE LOCAL chapter of Justice For Murder Victims is readying itself for recognition of National Victims' Rights Week, which begins April 26 and ends May 2.

The week is dedicated as a time to reflect upon the crisis of violent crime and victimization and, at the same time, promote and improve programs for victims of violent crimes.

Betty Day, who heads a local satellite office of the non-profit, San Francisco-based organization with Pacific Grove resident Ellen Manning, told the The Pine Cone that Justice for Murder Victims will kick off the week with a memorial service to be held at Grace Cathedral.

The service, which will recognize murder victims who were murdered as far back as 1963 and their surviving families, will be held at 6 p.m. Sunday, April 26. Grace Cathedral is located at 1051 Taylor St. in San Francisco.

Justice for Murder Victims, formed in 1985 as an offshoot of a San Francisco Chapter of Parents for Murdered Children, offers support to survivors of victims of crime by giving them a place to vent their feelings with people who have had similar experiences.

Locally, Day and Manning have plunged themselves into the job of consoling grieving peninsula relatives. They work with those who have had loved ones murdered and are having trouble coping with the sense of anger and frustration which accompanies the loss of a loved one through a violent crime.

Although primarily dealing with the survivor's emotional needs, the organization is also attempting to work within the legal system and make it harder for murderers to get out of prison and increase the length of sentences.

Last week Day's persistence in collecting 1,600 signatures for a petition demanding a long sentence paid off, as the murderer of her husband, Mike, received the stiffest sentence prescribed by state law.

Ray Martinez, convicted of killing Mike Day with a deer rifle 1½ years ago in a South San Jose neighborhood, was sentenced to 31 years to life in prison by a San Jose judge — the maximum sentence allowed.

Day, who was able to lean on other Justice for Murder Victim members throughout the lengthy trial of Martinez, has responded by attending other murder trials and lending support to the surviviors who must endure the pain of losing a loved one.

Day said it is especially hard for survivors to relive the nightmare of the murder each day in court.

Discrepancies need to be ironed out of Little project

By NANCY HILLS

THE CARMEL Planning Commission was "introduced" to the Little family's Carmel Sands Motel/Simpson's Restaurant project design April 8, but the "date" will have to wait until April 22.

Planning Director Diane White explained to the commission that staff and the Littles needed time to "iron out some discrepancies about the building site coverage."

Though unable to vote on the design, commission comments were very favorable about the primarily-cedar and Carmel stone building.

"Marvelous," said Commissioner Carla Ramsey. "The use of the materials is very sensitive."

"Congratulations," Commissioner Fred Keeble said, adding that architect Gene Takagawa "cooperated 100 percent."

Commissioners Bill Brown and Bruce Roberts were absent and Olof Dahlstrand stepped down because prior to his retirement he had been the original architect on the project.

Judged as one 32,000-square-foot project, the second story exceeds coverage allowed by code, White said in a later interview. The addition of 3,000 square feet for office space above the restaurant has put the building over the limit, White said.

The council granted a use permit for the addition of the office space for Matt Little's Carmel Insurance Co. last year. Matt Little has acted as family spokesman since the project's inception.

Little has the permission for the extra square footage, but the permit also states the project must meet with city design requirements.

In addition to the second-story overcoverage, White told the commission that the restaurant/bar is eight feet longer than allowed, but the roof line is eight feet shorter.

She added that the two-story structure is under height restrictions.

The demolition and reconstruction of the motel and restaurant, built in the 1950s, has been the center of controversy for the planning commission and city council since 1984 — when Little filed the application. The project was first proposed in 1982, but was withdrawn while work continued on a new general plan (completed in 1984.)

The controversy centered around whether the Littles could demolish the entire building and still keep — or "grandfather" in — the same number of rooms in the motel.

Under the current code, the motel has too many rooms per square foot of land.

Little also had filed to add 3,000 square feet of office space over the restaurant. He planned to use the space for his Carmel Insurance Co., now located above Nielsen's Market.

The former planning commission denied the "grandfathering" of the motel and restaurant, but the former city council, on appeal, reversed the decision, but without the office space.

After the city election in 1986, the new council approved Little's re-application for the extra 3,000 square feet.

If the commission approves the design, the project still must get a Coastal Commission permit. Building could not start until late fall, Little said.

•

THE COMMISSION also moved closer to wrapping up another long-term project — a specific plan for the R-4 district.

The special district, bounded by Mission and Torres streets and Third and Fourth Avenues, is the largest section of the city available for single-project development.

The areas with the greatest development potential are the upper Hayward Lumber yard on the east side of Junipero avenues between Third and Fourth avenues and lower lumber yard on the northwest corner of Junipero and Fourth avenues. The 58,900 square feet upper yard is owned by Tom Handley and the 20,000 square feet lower yard by Bob Murphy.

Density once again was a much-discussed issue after Carmel Staff Planner Brian Roseth told the commission that 66 units per acre along Junipero Avenue, as agreed upon in January, would allow the developer a density bonus that would increase it to 82 units per acre. State law allows a developer a 25 percent increase in density, ,which can only be used for affordable housing.

However, attorney Jim Heisinger told the commission that building the extra affordable units "economically can't be done," so the density would remain at 66 units per acre.

On the Torres Street side, next to a residential district, the density remained 33 units per acre but coverage was increased from 48 percent to 50 percent. Contractor Alan Williams, representing Handley, told the commission with greater coverage allowance the developer would be able to construct more single-story buildings, thus protecting the viewshed of Point Lobos.

The R-4 will return to the commission at a yet unspecified later date for discussions of landscaping, protecting viewshed and parking requirements.

•

THE COMMISSION also continued for further study a request from Carmel Plaza to allow third floor retail shops.

Current code allows service businesses on the third level but forbids retail. Second story retail is banned in other parts of the commercial district.

Steven Jacobs, Plaza leasing manager, told the commission that the space was needed to relocate Plaza shops. Also, he said, it would reduce water usage since the last business in one of the two spaces was a beauty parlor.

The Come Fly a Kite shop has to move because of Talbots clothing store opening in the shopping center and Casa Dolores Gallery, an art gallery, must move because its lease is up.

Jacobs wrote and submitted an ordinance to the commission which states that buildings with more than two levels above the street be allowed retail uses which reduce water consumption on the "uppermost story." Jacobs said that would decrease water consumption by 80,000 to 100,000 gallons per year.

However, Chairman White was not in favor of the idea.

"I'm absolutely opposed to the idea of (retail) commercial on the third floor of the Plaza. I think the Plaza has had a great amount of leeway in these things," he said.

Dahlstrand disagreed.

"I continue to oppose limiting retail uses on the second floors. In most structures, the second floor is not usually a retail use" simply because people will not climb the stairs, he said.

"I just feel this kind of restriction has created more problems than it has solved with the city," Dahlstrand added.

The commissioners agreed they were not ready to discuss the issue and referred the application to the land use committee for study.

•

IN OTHER business, the commission:

• Approved a shop space division in the former Blackburn & Blackburn location on Junipero Avenue between Sixth and Fifth avenues.

The commission determined that the split would reduce water usage because the businesses located in the new spaces are to have fewer employees than Blackburn & Blackburn.

The front shop is currently occupied by a new back products and health store, Armstrong & Harris.

• Granted a use permit for Mayor Clint Eastwood's underground garage for his office/retail complex on San Carlos Street between Sixth and Fifth avenues.

• Expanded an art gallery use permit for the current location of Bennett Gallery in Cottage Row on the corner of San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue. The present permit allows only sculpture, and the commission granted more types of art for the space.

The application was made by Fine Arts Acquisition, Inc.

Water conservation law must wait until July

By NANCY HILLS

A DISTRICTWIDE conservation ordinance will have to wait until at least July.

After listening to public comment, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District Monday changed its time schedule on the first reading of a conservation ordinance to May 11 so the earliest it could become law is in July.

The first reading was scheduled for April 30, but the water board removed the "urgency" designation from the ordinance, which changed the time schedule by one month.

The water board lengthened the schedule to allow the cities in the district and Monterey County more time to comment on the ordinance and to incorporate changes requested by those in attendance at its April 13 board meeting.

However, the board conducted a first reading on an ordinance to fund the project, though the legality of the proposed funding mechanism was questioned by one of Carmel's representatives, City Administrator Doug Schmitz.

The conservation ordinance is a mandatory program that requires all residents in the district to install water-saving kits in showers and toilets.

The water management district plans to purchase the kits, which include ultra-low flow shower heads and toilet dams, and distribute them door to door. A follow-up would be conducted by district staff.

It also mandated that residents and businesses install ultra-low flow toilets, 1.5-gallons per flush, and 2.5-gallon-per-minute showerheads when the home or business is sold. Ultra-low flow fixtures would also be required in new construction or for remodels of more than 20 percent.

Hotels and motels would be required to change to ultra-low flow fixtures within 90 days.

Objections to the ordinance were raised by the real estate community and the City of Carmel.

Items Carmel suggested be changed and the board agreed with included:

- Making the kit-installation program voluntary rather than mandatory.

"I think what you are interested in is compliance and water conservation," Carmel City Atty. Don Freeman said, which he believed would be more forthcoming if the program was voluntary.

- Violation of the ordinance listed as a infraction rather than a misdemeanor.
- Raising the remodel retrofit standard from 20 percent to 25 percent to comply with most city standards.
- Changing it from an urgency ordinance to a permanent ordinance.

The board also agreed to change wording of the the ordinance after a number of real estate agents and brokers told the board that the wording of the ordinance would make them legally liable for the installation of the fixtures.

The board discussed allowing an independent inspector, like the current energy inspector, verify compliance when the property is sold.

•

FUNDING OF the program, estimated to cost about $639,420 for 42,628 kits alone, was another area of concern for Carmel. The water district hopes to enter into a contract with the Monterey Peninsula Water Pollution Control Agency to pay for the kits.

The water pollution control agency is interested in reducing the water flow in the sewer system in order to increase its capacity.

The water management district has proposed to pay for its part of the program through user fee monies collected on the water bill and diversion of a portion of its property tax share.

The district's property tax share last year was $14,821 more than the limit allowed by the Gann bill, which must be refunded to the taxpayer.

Rather than pay postage and refund less than a dollar to each taxpayer, the district suggested using the money to buy the $15 kits, which would then be given to the taxpayer.

THE ROOF rat (ratus ratus) is slowly making its presence known in Carmel, with four of the rodents being snared last December. Health officials are mounting a campaign to stop the spread of these critters before their population expands further.

County health officials warn of roof rat increase

By DAVID LELAND

COUNTY HEALTH officials, fearing the worst scenario, have issued a stern warning to Carmel residents on what appears to be an increase in the roof rat population.

First spotted in Carmel in 1983, the adult rat is black to brownish gray with a head and body length of six to about eight inches. Its dark, uniform tail is as long as, or longer than, the head and body.

Last December, Robert Doty, a public health biologist, trapped four of the rats in the ivy-covered embankment at the corner of Ninth and Junipero avenues.

This led him to inform health officials of a potential problem brewing in Carmel.

"In California, the roof rat in a few instances has been associated with bubonic plage and murine typhus," says Doty, in a letter to the county director of environmental health. "The number of cases of rat dermatitis in the state has also increased."

But Doty says there this is not cause to call in the Pied Piper, just yet.

The rat apparently "hasn't manifested itself this severely," he says. "However, the potential for disease transmission is always present and probably will increase if the rat population grows."

What residents need to do, Doty says, is begin to change their landscaping, which the rats use to breed, and trap or poison the critters.

In optimum conditions, the rat will breed all year long, with litters averaging six young. Life expectancy is seven to 12 months.

"Roof rat problems have increased in California, particularly in affluent residental areas with mature landscaping," says Doty.

"These animals live above ground for the most part and are noted for their climbing ability and ability to travel from one location to another, especially along utility lines or fence tops, and in overhanging landscaped shrubs and trees."

But there are ways to control the problem before it gets out of hand. First off, the rat population needs to be eliminated.

"The most important factor for survival of a rat population is a constant source of food and water," says Doty.

With this in mind, he outlines several methods to ruin the rat's environment. These are:

- Bring pet food in the house during nighttime hours.
- Maintain garbage cans with tight-fitting lids.
- Pick up and remove fallen fruit and nuts.
- Maintain a year-round snail and slug killing campaign, especially in ivy.
- Remove and dispose of dog droppings.
- Compost piles should be enclosed by hardware cloth or similar rodent-proof materials.
- Repair leaky water faucets.
- Eliminate or empty any containers that provide available water.

•

DOTY SAYS after the rats' food and water is diminished, they will be more ready to accept baits used in trapping or poisoning.

Doty recommends using traps instead of poison when there are children in the area or when pets cannot be kept away from the poison.

He adds that proper placement of the trap is essential to getting rid of the rodents.

Outdoors, Doty says snap traps can be nailed to fence rails or tree trunks. In order to protect children from accidently springing the traps, he recommends setting them inside small weather-resistant boxes which have a two-inch diameter opening for rats to enter.

A good rule of thumb, he says, is to set three traps for each rodent believed to be in the area.

Indoor, traps can be placed in the garage or attic (wherever droppings occur). Snap traps should be tied down to prevent them being carried away by rats.

In the kitchen, traps can be set in cabinets, or in the dead space below bottom drawers, beneath sinks and around the refrigerator or stove. The traps should be inaccessible to youngsters.

For residents who want to use poison to kill the rats, extreme caution should be used. The Carmel Police Department has reported that two cats and one dog have died, apparently from eating the poison put out for rats.

Doty recommends anticoagulant baits because of their relative safety. These are available at hardware, feed stores and from the county Agricultural Commissioner's office.

He also provides several tips to keep the house safe while using poison. Such as:

- Placing the bait in boxes to prevent children or pets getting a hold of it.
- Placing the bait boxes where rats usually travel or spend time such as in vegetation or on top of fence rails.
- Anticoagulant baits must be left out continuously until the problem is resolved and all feeding has stopped.
- Paraffin-impregnated anticoagulant bait blocks have been found to be effective for roof rats if attached or placed where the rats will find them.

•

AFTER THE rats have disappeared, Doty says residents should work on making their

Underground garage for senior complex progressing

By DAVID LELAND

AFTER AN almost four-month delay, Carmel is now moving ahead with its architectural plans for a 36-space underground parking garage to be built beneath the proposed senior citizens housing complex.

The garage, which initially received approval by the Carmel City Council in January, had been put on hold while the city's water problems were reviewed by the California Coastal Commission.

The garage and senior housing complex will be located at Fifth Avenue and Dolores Street on city property which is now a vacant lot being used as a dirt parking lot.

On March 3, the Coastal Commission said that it would not approve any new water usage permits for Carmel, which basically put senior housing on hold until a solution could be reached.

But on March 13, at a special city council meeting, the council exempted senior housing from its water moratorium and said it will receive its water allotment from the city's water reserves.

Providing the architectural services for the project is Boris Jacoubowsky, president of Davis, Jacoubowsky, Hawkins, Walker Associates Inc., a Monterey-based firm.

The same firm has been working with the Carmel Foundation providing designs for the surface structure, which will include 24 units to house low-income elderly people.

According to Jacoubowsky, the schematic design, design development, construction document and construction phases for the garage will come to about $27,250.

Off-site design work around the garage, such as curb, gutter and sidewalk work, will cost a maximum of $4,500.

The Carmel Planning Commission must still approve the plans to see if they are in conformity with the city's general plan.

yard so it is not a good place for rats to make a home.

He recommends removing dead foliage, trimming vines and ivy from fences and planting other types of ground covers.

But he cautions residents against doing any landscaping adjustments until the rat population has been reduced by at least 95 percent.

If the habitat is distrubed before the rats have been killed, there is a danger of the animals going to another person's property which has the type of environment they like.

Doty says it is imperative that the public become aware of the potential problem of the roof rat population growing within Carmel.

"For centuries rats and mice have been undesirable companions of humans," he says. "Their mere presence causes great distress in most people and historically they have caused more human illness and death than any other group of mammals.

"They cause enormous economic loss through their gnawing, feeding and contamination of foodstuffs, with estimates per rat per year ranging from 1 to $10."

For further information on identification of rats or advice on the proper way to eliminate them, call Animal Control Officer Valerie Henderson at 624-6403.

Carmel Valley resident runs into red tape over Scenic Road lot

By DAVID LELAND

IT'S BEEN a frustrating five years for Carmel Valley resident Jim Bell, who says all he wants is to be able to use his vacant lot on Scenic Road to house his mobile home.

But Bell, who bought the small lot just south of the Frank Lloyd Wright House in 1980, says no matter what use he plans for the property he is met with governmental red tape.

Earlier this year Bell had his request to house a small trailer on the property turned down by the county Planning Commission, which cited the area land use plan in its decision.

The lot, according to county planner Dale Ellis, is for "very limited recreational type use."

The planning staff told Bell that putting a trailer on the lot is "inconsistent" with the plan and denied a permit.

Now, Bell has appealed that decision to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors, which will hear the case at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday, April 21, in the courthouse in Salinas.

"We bought it (lot) to build a house on but the county said 'no,' " Bell said. "There's other things you can do with it (the county said). Now we can't even do that."

Bell said if the appeal is upheld by the board of supervisors, he will put a house trailer on the lot and use it for friends and occasionally rent it out.

He added that his permanent residence would remain at the Mouth of the Valley.

The wait is over for youth center weight room

By DAVID LELAND

ABOUT $35,000 worth of weightlifting equipment found its way into the renovated workout room at the Carmel Youth Center last week, as Mayor Clint Eastwood brought his pet project one step closer to completion.

Last fall Eastwood pledged $20,000 to help refurbish what at that time was a deserted storage room in the lower portion of the center. But after the work was completed, the wait began for the weights.

In the meantime, Eastwood travelled to Venice in Southern California for the opening of his friend Joe Gold's World Gym. There he appeared with bodybuilder-actor Arnold Schwarzeneger in the gala event.

Then Gold, acting with Mike Hays — who outfitted the World Gym — met with several with body building firms and asked for donations for the Carmel Youth Center. All the requests were honored.

Gold also donated equipment to the new weight room at the youth center, including rubber matting.

After a three-month wait, the youth center received its state-of-the-art equipment last Friday, which includes free weights, a five-piece "jungle" system and a selectorized machine.

Eastwood, who has been instrumental in the youth center becoming an active part of the community after falling into disarray during recent years, was visibly happy as he unloaded weights from their boxes and watched the workers assemble the machines.

"It's coming along day by day," said Eastwood as he surveyed the scene. "I suppose in a week or two we'll be able to do something here."

But before any workouts can begin at the center, carpeting will have to be laid and the rubber matting applied throughout the free weight area, according to Beth Kastrup, recreation director.

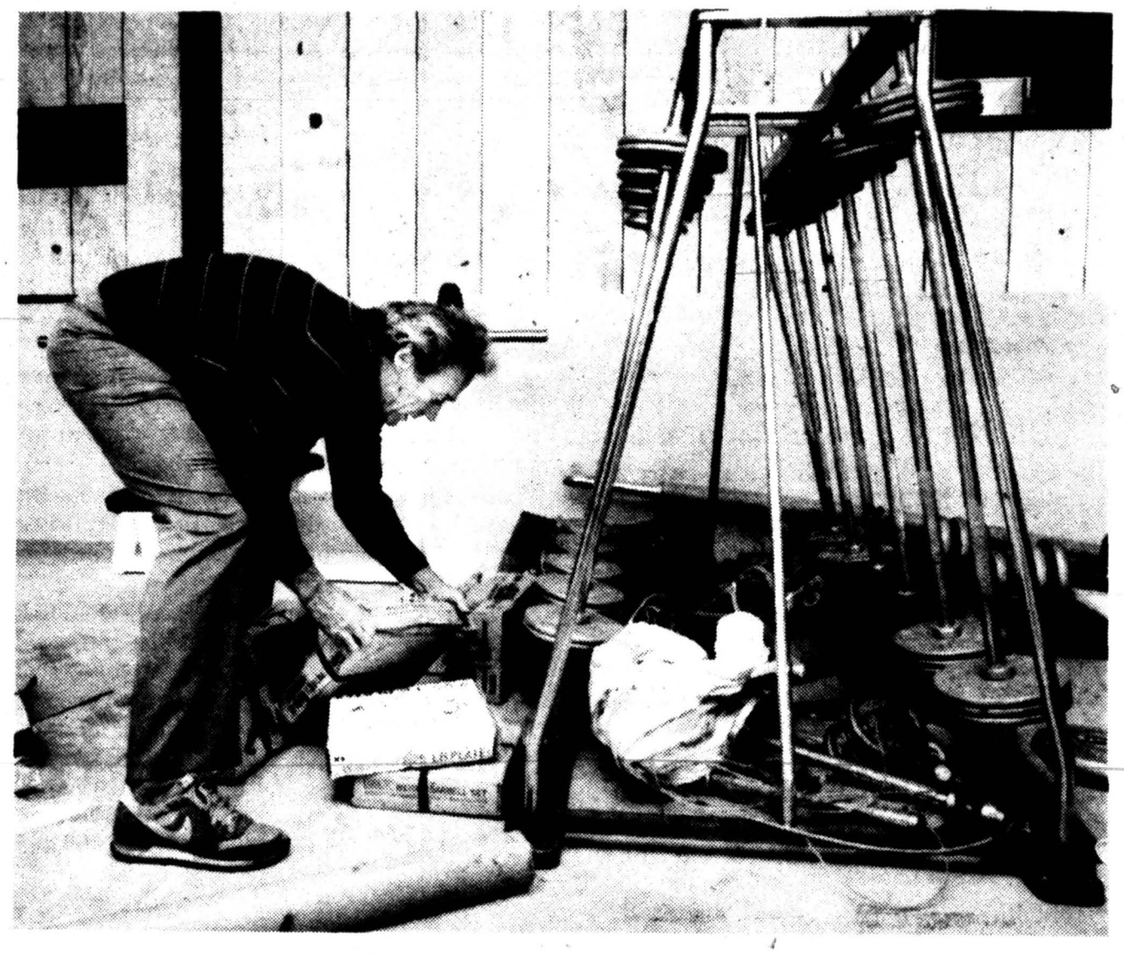
"We want to be open by summertime," she said. Kastrup added that before summer there would be some workouts allowed.

One of Eastwood's ideas is to have members of the police and fire departments work out with the youngsters in an attempt to create positive role models.

But first Kastrup has to find someone to run the gym who is experienced in not only lifting weights but also setting up weight training programs.

"We want someone who's enthusiastic and really wants to get this program off the ground," she said.

Kastrup said the hours will be flexible but the days will be after school and on Saturdays.



MAYOR CLINT Eastwood took part in the unloading of weights last Friday at the Carmel Youth Center. Eastwood is responsible for the refurbished weight room at the youth center, which will be open for workouts sometime before summer. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Crossroads Travel sponsoring golf tour to Scotland, Ireland

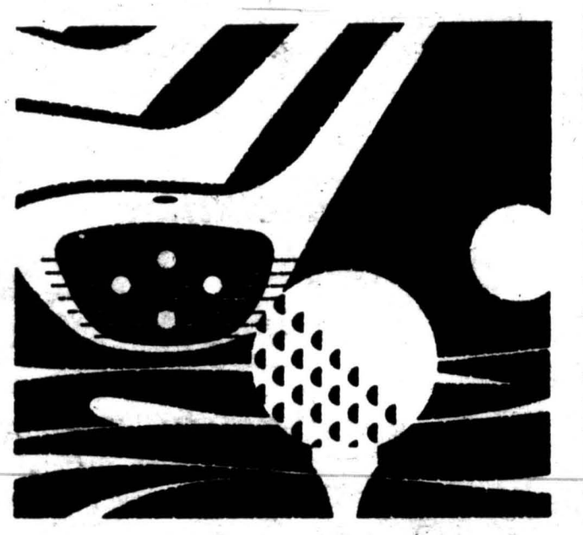
Crossroads Travel is presenting a second golf tour to Ireland and Scotland departing in July 1987. Featured on this particular tour are five of the top golf courses in Ireland.

Lahinch, known as the "St. Andrews of Irish golf," provides a fierce challenge to the golfer's skill while providing him with breathtaking views of some of the best golfing country that nature ever produced.

Ballybunion is another course on the tour — one of the finest links courses in the world overlooking the Atlantic Ocean. With the lake and the Kerry mountains as a backdrop the group will play the Killarney Killeen course.

Moving to the eastern part of Ireland the group will play the longest and most rigorous test of golf in the country — Portmarnock. Arnold Palmer calls it "the best in the world."

The final stop in Ireland will bring the golfers to the Royal Dublin Course, which has hosted many major championships, including the Irish Open. While in Ireland the group will be staying at Dromoland Castle and the Westbury Hotel.



Upon arriving in Scotland the group will stay at the Turnberry Hotel and play the famous Ailsa course, the scene of the 1986 British Open which saw Greg Norman capture his first major title.

"Tam Arte Quam Marte" — "As Much By Skill as By Strength" is the club motto at Troon, another course to be visited by the group.

Carnoustie, which is reputed to have the toughest finish in golf and is one of the oldest courses in Scotland, is on the itinerary at the request of many of the golfers who were on the last trip.

Rounding out the trip, the group will play the famed "Old Course" at St. Andrews where golf was first recorded to have been placed in 1457! Muirfield or Gullane will be available for those golfers whose skill and handicap permit. The group will be staying at the Old Course Golf and Country Club while in the St. Andrews area.

A full round of sightseeing and special activities have been arranged for the non-golfers in the group. Leading the tour will be Al Krueger, golf professional at the Round Hill Golf and Country Club. Al did this tour two years ago and is familiar with all the courses to be played.

Green fees, hotels, meals, transportation and special banquets are included in the price. The tour is limited to 28 persons and there is still some space available. Further information can be obtained by calling Crossroads Travel at 624-5434.

Bob McGinnis Travel answers questions on cruise vacations

Bob McGinnis Travel answers the most commonly asked questions about cruise vacations:

What's there to do on a cruise? Won't I get bored?

Hardly. Being at sea gives you a feeling of freedom few places can offer. There's plenty of room. And it'll probably take you two or three days just to discover what's on board.

On a modern-day cruise ship, you'll have the opportunity to roam and enjoy all the public rooms and deck space. Plus the added adventure of exploring new and exciting ports of call — either on your own or on a guided tour with your shipmates.

Cruise ships are like floating resorts, with all the things fine resorts have to offer. You can be by yourself and lie back on a lounge chair, breathe in the sea air, soak up the sun, read good books or watch the ever-changing view. Or you can join in the early morning exercise classes, dance classes, sports contest and other organized deck activities. You can practice your tennis strokes and putting, drive golf balls, and shoot skeet. You can go for a swim, stretch out in the sauna or work out in the gym. You can take in a feature movie, listen to a lecture, or play backgammon or bridge. You'll find there isn't time to be bored, but there's always plenty of time to relax and have fun. No matter what kind of fun and relaxation you enjoy.

Are there medical services on board?

Every cruise ship has a fully-equipped medical facility and staff to handle almost any emergency should something unexpected occur.

How do I book a cruise?

See Bob McGinnis Travel, we offer a selection of cruises that fits your vacation schedule, tastes and pocketbook. Bob McGinnis Travel will make all the arrangements needed to get you from your doorsteps to your stateroom.

Ocean sanctuary act offers protection for coastline

SEN. ALAN Cranston has introduced legislation that will give long-range protection to the state's coastal environment — including Monterey Bay and Big Sur — against "the depredations of the administration's irresponsible energy policy."

Cranston said he introduced his bill, the California Ocean Sanctuary Act of 1987, to counter the Reagan administration's "stubborn refusal" to reach consensus agreement with California's Congressional delegation over oil and gas development on the Outer Continental Shelf.

The bill will, among other things, protect five "geographical basins" north of Morro Bay, including Monterey Bay and Big Sur, from oil and gas development, something Cranston feels the administration is headed for.

"Interior Secretary Donald P. Hodel seems determined to lease tracts virtually everywhere on the OCS off California, even at the expense of the California environment and the California economy," he said. "We must stop him."

The Cranston bill will permanently restrict oil development to certain areas off the California coast and ban ocean incineration the entire length of the 1,000-mile coastline.

"My bill provides a sensible, balanced, rational way of preserving for posterity the beauty of the California coastal zones while still permitting leasing and energy production in the most promising and lease vulnerable areas," Cranston said.

Within the proposed ocean sanctuary:

- Dumping or burning of toxic or hazardous waste will be banned from Mexico to the Oregon border, seaward to a distance of 200 miles.
- Oil and gas development will be permanently banned in the Central and Northern California planning areas, from Morro Bay to the Oregon border, seaward to distances ranging from 60 to 180 miles. The bill thus would make permanent the year-to-year moratorium Congress imposed in fiscal 1982-1985.
- A permanent ban on fossil fuel development also will be imposed in certain "environmentally sensitive" areas off the Southern California coast where untapped oil and gas resources are believed to be minimal.

Those areas include the average 20-mile wide buffer zone off Orange and San Diego counties, plus Santa Monica Bay, the Channel Islands, and the Santa Barbara buffer zone — areas previously covered by a Congressional moratorium.

Cranston said his bill thus will give statuary protection to the Channel Islands National Marine Sanctuary, a six-mile-wide zone around the four northern islands and Santa Barbara Island, and to the Santa Barbara Channel Ecological Preserve, which runs 18 miles parallel to the coast, from Carpenteria to Goleta, seaward of the state's three-mile sanctuary.

Both those areas currently enjoy only administration protection.

"My bill will insure safe access to commercial thruways in Santa Monica Bay and preserve the natural and untouched panoramas off the San Diego and Orange county coastlines," he said.

"And it will protect the five geological basins north of Morro Bay and preserve, for continued human enjoyment, the scenic points at the Mendocino headlands, the Point Reyes National Seashore, Bodego Bay, the Golden Gate National Seashore, the Farallone Islands, Santa Cruz beach, Monterey Bay, Big Sur, and San Simeon."

"California tourism and fishing are important industries that depend on healthy beaches and shores. Such fragile environments can be seriously damaged by even a single major oil or toxic spill, and they could be insidiously destroyed by incomplete burning of hazardous wastes," Cranston said.

"My bill is designed to counter the Reagan administration's stubborn refusal to reach a consensus agreement with California's Congressional delegation on this extremely important issue. Passage of my legislation will give long-range protection to California's coastal environment against the depredation of the administration's irresponsible energy policy."

Carmel Underground

LATELY THERE has been a lot of hype about the probability of the upcoming '80s and '90s bringing a revival of the '60s. This concept can be attributed in part to the liberal way of thinking arising from the increasing social opposition to issues such as the arms race and apartheid.

Students were a major part of the '60s movement, participating in sit-downs, peace marches, and the publication of liberal literature, such as Carmel High School's new Carmel Underground.

Completely anonymous, the Carmel Underground is a monthly paper, or more precisely, a monthly pamphlet which expresses students' views about politics, Carmel High, world problems, and life in general.

It all began one day with the first publication in March. Students opened their lockers on a seemingly average school day and were surprised to find curious papers flutter to their feet. Upon opening these papers, students read about such topics as the arms race, Carmel High's Associated Student Body (ASB), the smoking problem, Principal Marie Ishida, Reagangate, and famine.

Although there were not enough copies to go around, the news spread like fire and soon everyone was talking about the mysterious publication. Some teachers even read Carmel Underground to their classes.

Says senior Bart Landsman, "I like the idea; it gets people thinking, but I don't really think it will change anything."

Student opinion is very positive, although the opinion of the faculty is divided. The fact that the paper is anonymous bothers some adult authorities, including vice principal Joe Feldeisen.

"But," states freshman Tom Hawkins, "if it weren't anonymous the paper wouldn't be as real. Writers would have to think about impressing the faculty."

If the names are published, the writers would worry about being punished for some of their more negative views, thus their writing would be stifled and their purpose defeated.

"One thing I would change," adds Tom, "is the method of distribution. The paper seems to be largely upper classmen-oriented, and the freshman aren't as well exposed to it."

After reading last week's second edition, Senior Class President Maile Smith was pleased that rebuttals are welcomed and published. "At first I was a bit upset by the article on the uselessness of the ASB. But in the end it all comes around because both sides of the issue are shown."

Although some find the articles concerning Ishida and the ASB a little extreme, English teacher Bob Walch thinks differently.

"I don't find anything in the paper so controversial that it couldn't be published in the regular CHS paper, The Sandpiper," he said. "If students feel a certain way about Ms. Ishida, they should talk with her directly. She is a very open and understanding person who would like to hear input from the students."

If the big secret will ever be revealed, no one can say. The paper does, however, bring "unity" (according to Hawkins) to Carmel High, which is something students complain Carmel lacks. The only thing left to do is wait until June for the next surprise issue of The Carmel Underground.

CaRMEL UnDeRGrOUND — RECYCLE IDEAS PASSION — CARMEL UNDERGROUND

March 6, 1987

Edition I

This is an underground newspaper. It is written and run by students and is not censored by anyone. It contains the opinions of students at Carmel High, and although we will not print anything that is blatantly untrue or pornographic, we will print anyone's opinion. We welcome opposing views. Articles are anonymous so that people will be able to express themselves more freely. No one believes that this school is perfect-an underground newspaper can get people talking and thinking about the problems that exist ...and maybe even deciding to to something about them.

OUR ILLUSTRIOUS GOVERNMENT

As usual, our second semester A.S.B. class elections were greeted with wild enthusiasm by the students of Carmel High. Of the 23 positions we were supposed to vote on, only eight were contested. The senior class had a difficult decision to make- only one person ran for each of the four openings. The question was: why bother to vote?

Obviously, people are not exactly cutting each others' throats for the honor and privilege of being involved in student government, or "leadership" as it's called. If you talk to the class officers, you can see why. "It's gay," "It's lame," "It sucks," and "It's a total farce," are direct quotes from some of our representatives. They get up early three times a week to do the school such valuable services as making posters and listening to Mr. Feldeisen talk. Their dedication has a profound effect on the rest of the students, who couldn't care less what A.S.B. is doing. Elections are more like popularity contests than a democratic process. If you're not insecure about your popularity, the best reason to run is that it looks good on your records.

Not everyone feels this way. Maybe the little power we have is better than nothing. The purpose of government is to represent the students- do you feel represented? So what's the point? One former class officer says, "A.S.B. was, is, and always will be a useless institution." What do you think?

THE OBVIOUS REASON FOR EDUCATION

We often mutter, "What's the use of algebra? I'll never use that in my life." But if you think about it, what's the use of anything in school? Grammar? History? P.E.? Of course, the answer that always hits you in the face is: so you can graduate and go to a good college! But why go to a good college? Obviously: to get a good job. But why? To earn money, so you can buy a house and have equity and property taxes! That's why! So... (back)

Many happy returns

Dear Plasma and Bloomer:

Word of your famous column of investment advice has drifted like the odor off a fertilized cornfield all the way back here to Nebraska. You Carmel fellas have yet to hit the evening news like your Hollywood mayor, but the word of mouth advertising has been tremendous. (By the way, I hope I spelled your strange names correctly.) I hope to visit your area with my wife Calpurnia and bring back some of those furry little sea otter dolls.

Anyway, what I'd like you boys to do for me is this: Can you tell me what I should expect in the way of an investment return? Some folks talk about doubling their money or getting 20 percent a year. I can't make any sense out of all these extravagant claims. Please tell me what a sensible return might be.

Yours Truly
Halliburton G. Funnel

Dear Mr. Funnel:

We were pleased to receive your letter from Nebraska. It's quite ironic that you should be asking questions about a subject we were considering for a future column.

First, let's try to establish a solid benchwork, a number or a method that will always be there to keep us in touch with investment realities. That benchmark exists and it's called risk-free rate, the best return possible without worry or investment forethought. In other words, a sure thing. At any given moment the risk-free return is the yield on a one-year T-bill. Currently the risk-free return is about 6.10 percent.

Now this risk-free or one-year T-bill rate is generally one of the leading indicators of changes in interest rates. When the rate is low, as it is now compared to just a few years ago, your expections about the return on any investment should be realistically tied to that low figure. For example, if your investment return this year is 50 percent higher than the risk-free rate, you should expect less than a double-digit return, or about 9 percent.

Now, double the risk-free rate, or 12 percent, would be a very respectable return in this interest environment. Obviously the 12 percent return would no longer be risk-free would it?

What we're trying to say here is this: 12 percent may have been a safe return a few years ago but not today. Try to be reasonable.

Our second and final point would be to consider the consequences of long-term compounding of what would appear to be a small return. Your money will double in twelve years if you compound today's risk-free rate. At 8 percent your money would double in nine years. There's a formula you use to determine how long it takes to double your money. It's called the Rule of 72. Simply divide 72 by any expected long-term rate and the answer will be the number of years it will take for you to double your money.

Sincerely,
The Boys from Carmel

CARMEL VOTES AGAINST PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS
(Stand-Patters Also in Control of New Board of Trustees— Town Safe From "Progress" for Another Two Years)

The proposition to issue bonds to provide for Carmel necessary fire combat apparatus and to erect a city hall were defeated at Monday's election.

The largest vote ever recorded in a municipal election was cast. Of a registration of 416 voters, only 336 balloted. There was a great deal of freak voting. Many voted for the bonds and against the "Progressives" and vice versa. Some voted for Newberry and Dorwart only and on the bonds not at all. It was a glorious day — for some. The winners are glad and the losers are game.

MASS-MEETING TO PROTEST BILLBOARDS

Public action to fight billboards on the Carmel-San Simeon highway will be inaugurated here Monday evening with a mass-meeting of peninsula citizens at Sunset auditorium. The meeting will be held at 8 o'clock, with Carmel Martin, chairman of the County Planning Commission, presiding and presenting the details of the matter.

Reeve Conover, engineer of the planning commission, appeared before an assembly committee in Sacramento Monday evening, to protest a bill, which, he declared, is being forced through the legislature by billboard interests. His protest was steam-rollered. It is believed, however, that sufficiently vehement public pressure may still halt the bill which would make it possible for one of the world's finest scenic highways to be desecrated with billboards. Petitions will be circulated through the entire affected area.

BRIEFS...

Elmer Booth showed around a clutch of pictures of San Francisco right after the earthquake at the Fire Watch luncheon yesterday, when someone at his table noted that in a picture of San Francisco "refugees" seated on a littered sidewalk on their trunks and boxes, all the men were neatly tailored and everyone wore a bowler hat, all the women were fashionably hatted and gloved as well as dressed to the eyes.

"How is it that those refugees happened to be so calm, well groomed and well organized?" Booth was asked.

"Because," Elmer said, "those were the days before they had 'life adjustment' courses in schools.

SEXUALITY IS SCHOOL BOARD SUBJECT

A Human Sexuality course to be offered to all eighth-grade students at CMS met no dissension at Tuesday night's school board meeting and contingent upon individual parental approval, will be implemented this May into the P.E. department class schedule.

Board member, Dr. Robert Whitehead called the course, "well overdue and a fine addition to the curriculum."

The four-day unit of instruction will be taught each spring to coeducational groups during regularly scheduled physical education periods. Topics to be covered include male and female roles in society, and physical and emotional changes in males and females during adolescence.

The proposal stipulates that any parent may elect not to have their child participate in the class. Parents will be notified prior to the start of class.

SOCIAL SECURITY MOVE STIRS PROTESTS

Can the Social Security Administration adequately serve the needs of the Monterey Peninsula in its new location at Carmel Rancho Shopping Center?

It's been only one month since the Social Security office moved there after 15 years in one location in Monterey, but some people already have their doubts.

One of them is Congressman Leon Panetta, who has called the move to Carmel "unfortunate" and a "disservice" to the public. Panetta has asked for an investigation by a Congressional subcommittee.

Frank Figueroa, district Social Security manager, said the office was moved only after the General Services Administration spent two years looking for a new location.

AIDS test offered free to patients

Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula will provide free blood tests for all patients who received blood transfusions between 1977 and June 30, 1985 to help them determine if they have been exposed to the AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) virus.

The testing program began March 24 and is the result of a recommendation by the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) that such patients have their blood tested, even though CDC indicated there is a very low risk of getting the AIDS virus from a blood transfusion.

The years 1977 to 1985 were targeted because that was the period between the discovery of the virus associated with AIDS and development of a routine screening procedure designed to protect blood supplies.

"For a number of reasons, we believe it is important for these people to know if they have been exposed to the AIDS virus," said Community Hospital Senior Vice President Jay Hudson. "We view it as our responsibility to the public to offer these tests without charge and to counsel people as needed. We urge people in this group to call us and schedule an appointment."

The hospital has established a special telephone line (626-1022) to receive calls for appointments for the blood test.

Hudson said it is important that people schedule appointments so the testing process can be handled in a confidential and orderly fashion. There is no urgency in obtaining the test. Standardized testing procedures will be followed, including confirmatory testing of initially positive results.

"As many as 12,000 blood transfusions were given at Community Hospital during that period," he said. "But some may have moved away from the Monterey Peninsula and some may not want to have their blood tested. Thus we don't have an accurate estimate of how many tests we'll perform."

"It's important for everyone to know that a positive test does not necessarily mean they have AIDS. If only means they have been exposed to the AIDS virus."

"Sammy" awards night

"ADVERTING" TO an American custom, the Monterey Peninsula Ad Club, always aware of the need for admiration for the art of advertisement, adjudged and awarded the creators of the most appealing and artistic ads in a classy ceremony. For their Oscar night the awards are called Sam Seagull Awards, or "Sammy" for short.

The evening was done in style, starting with the formal presentation of awards in the Steinbeck Forum by Kathy Nash (KMST-46) and Jerry Connelly (KWAV) spotlighted at opposite sides of the stage. Visual presentations were shown on a screen centered between them by executive producer Mark D. Sullivan, who wrote and directed the show with the assistance of Jeff Carson (videographer/editor), Grant Huntington and Mark Rice (photographers), and Jed Friedland and Jeff Workman (composers).

With 87 gold and silver plaques to present, Kathy and Jerry called on Sharon Bates, Jeff Lee, Jerry Meltzer and Karen Keller for momentary relief at the microphones. There was no parade to the stage with endless thank-yous as at the Hollywood bash. Winners were spotlighted as they stood up at their seats.

Top winners, with nearly a dozen awards each, were Jerry Takigawa and Paul Fingerote. Following close behind were Bill Cooke and Craig Bowen.

Mr. Takigawa's clients included The Lodge at Pebble Beach, the Monterey Film Festival, Concours d'Elegance, The Barnyard and the Sam Seagull Awards. Mr. Fingerote's recognition was earned by serving such clients as Monterey Jazz Festival, Hyatt Regency Monterey, Ventana Inn and the Monterey College of Law. Thanks to "guess-who" — one of his winners was a jingle "Make My Stay" for the Hyatt Regency.

The funniest, cleverest and best of show was "Freddie Foot," speaker for Joy-Per's Shoes with another best going to Marianne Lewine for "The North Face" by Lou Sena. Especially touching was Gold winner Dave Gurien's "Operation Graduation" for KMST-46, which was an appeal for not driving while drunk starring Stephanie Winn and submitted by Tom Tucker. KMST also won for two sophisticated ads: "Cats" by Jeff Carson and "Dominoes, Ferrari, Dream" by Mark Walker and talent by Judythe Bartholomew. Gold was taken by Matrix Communiction, Inc. by Mark Shattuck, Sheila Toner and Flip Baldwin — "Your Key to Quality."

Doing well were Color-Ad Printer, James Kyllo, The Wecker Group and Marc D'Estout, who submitted two entries and won two awards. One for the Armin Hansen Book and one for Henrietta Shore book for the M.P. Museum of Art. Barry Masteller won by being illustrator, copywriter and advertiser.

The black tie guests used the crosswalk to the Sheraton Ballroom for a gourmet buffet dinner, dancing and a few short speeches. Ad Club president James C. Bowen, Jr. greeted guests and said the six judges (from points to the north) told him that the quality of the 325 entries was exceptionally high.

Seagull Awards chairman Jess Ellis Knubis, said, "If you did not win a Sammy, remember that Richard Burton never won an Oscar, and that the best reward is a satisfied customer."

Mark D. Sullivan was given a Lifetime Honorary Membership to the Ad Club. Thanks were given to Mary O'Sullivan for her assistance beyond the call of duty, to Masson for the Steinbeck Wine Reception and to Gary Ibsen for Monterey Vineyard wines served with dinner.

Table decorations were black top hats, seagull sculptures and silver streamers.

When you see seagulls overhead, remember there are a few in gold and silver in homes throughout the area.

VOLUNTEER EXECS PARTY BUT ONCE A YEAR

About one hundred volunteer executives, members of the Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services, closed their Thrift Shop and took a well-deserved holiday. Executive is the title that fits best. Without pay, these ladies run a full-fledged business in Seaside to help others. They have distributed more than $1 million to 47 charitable and cultural organizations serving the local communities since 1950. They gave $45,095 in '84, $53,535 in '85 and $68,874 in '86. That takes not only a large amount of hard work but executive abilities as well.

Enough of that, now about their one day off each year. On Thursday members of MPVS met for a delicious Spring Luncheon in the Fiesta Room of Hacienda Carmel. Balloons, flowers, and pink napkins gave a springtime atmosphere and fun was efficiently expedited post haste. Olga Scheffler (luncheon chair) greeted all and maintained the spirit of fun and gaity throughout the social.

Like everyone else, these ladies "love a parade" and parade they did with their "Show-and-Tell Parade" to the piano tunes of June Hardy. The object was to show off a hat, a dress, a jacket, shoes, or a complete outfit purchased at their Thrift Shop. The past-presidents judged the "best-of-the-show" winner. Jo Owen won with her brown sack coat and a striking two-piece dress — all from the Seaside

Thrift Shop. Jo did sew the bags together, line the coat and decorate it with drawings and words. Her prize was a colorful afghan made by Cleo Rupp (from yarn from the shop, of course.) As the ladies paraded everyone was given a gift — wrapped and be-ribboned by Ruth Slade and Ardis Turnbull. All were carefully selected from thrift merchandise. A throw pillow, a watch, a serving plate, a new purse, stationery, etc.

The luncheon honored past presidents Katherine Wilson, Claire Kennedy, Jane Hardy, Fran McLean, Ann Marshall and Ruth Blanchard (who was unable to attend). Cuurent president is Edan Denholm. Fran McLean, Marion Harris and Kay Wilson decorated the Fiesta Room, lunch tickets were handled by Jo Owen, Anne Marie O'Loughlin and Mary Gannon. ADAT AND DMR FOR ART PATRONS

Everything seemed to click into place perfectly late Friday afternoon for the Preview Party at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art. Exhibits were of great interest, well displayed, and the Jesters served exceptionally attractive and tasty hors d'oeuvres with wine. There seemed to be a continental flavor tinging the air.

Curator/collector E. Thomas Murray of Marin charmed everyone with his genuine love for the tribal art (Adat: Tribal Imagery/Ancestral Law) of the Indonesian Archipelago — Borneo, Sumatra, the Sundas, the Moluccas, and the Philippines. He has spent more than 10 years studying and acquiring his vast collection. First, he went to university in Europe, and while doing so, he absorbed knowledge from the museum collections there.

We observed his fluency in languages — speaking Balinese with one guest and German with another. And, although he would rather not sell the art he finds fascinating, on occasion, he has found it necessary to do so. Judith E. Hilburn from Vallejo is one of his buyers who came for the opening night.

Mr. Murray said, "I found the LA people 'jaded' in their reaction to art and there's a lack of sophistication in San Francisco." He appeared pleased with the intellectual and cultural reponse in Monterey and indicated his willingness to return for a lecture or walk-through-talk on the stunning, high-quality pieces shown.

Going from The Work (main) Gallery, visitors to the museum may view part of the permanent collection of Chinese art (from whence came the migration of megalithis peoples of the Indonesian Archipelago around 3,000 years ago).

REAL ESTATE TODAY

What You're Buying When You Buy A Condo

By Jayde Thompson

There's more to owning a condo than just endless poolside barbecues and friendly gatherings in the recreation center. When you buy a condo you are buying a substantial piece of property. In many ways buying a condominium is similar to buying a single family home. Your offer to buy a home is normally subject to your approval of the preliminary title report and the convenants, conditions, and restrictions ("C.C. & R.'s") on the property. Make sure you exercise the same right of approval when you buy a condo.

As owner of a condo you are also part of the association that owns all the common areas of the condominium complex, including the pool, spa, tennis courts, and any other recreational facilities. Find out what fees you'll be required to pay to maintain the common areas. And it's also a good idea to take a close look at the association's financial statement and the restrictions and by-laws governing the complex.

Condos can bring you a great deal of enjoyment, but they're not an investment to be taken lightly. I'd like to help make sure you select the one that's right for you. So call me, Jayde Thompson, your Carmel specialist at Real Estate By The Sea at 624-1444 or stop by my office at San Carlos and Seventh.

Featured in the Asian Gallery are important regional artists of the early 1900s. Arthur and Lucia Mathews, William Keith, Eugen Newhaus, Xavier Martinez and others who were invited to show at the initial opening of the old Del Monte Hotel Gallery in the spring of 1907. These works are colorful, large, and of historic as well as artistic interest.

The Del Monte Revisited (DMR) display is part of the museum's 80th anniversary celebration of the opening of the gallery in the old Del Monte Hotel, which is considered the granddaddy of our local art colony and array of galleries. The celebration of this landmark event, along with a satellite exhibition at the U.S. Naval Postgraduate School will culminate in an Edwardian Ball on May 2. Tickets are out, and you may attend either in Edwardian dress or black tie. So, dust off your horseless carriage and get ready.

Can you believe this? As we came through the Sheraton Grande lobby in LA someone leaving "Friends of Westminster Citizens' Awards Dinner" handed me a program for their evening. Noticed that Robert E. Am I branded some place)...Jim Bennett will soon by PR/Fund Development Director of SPCA...New chef of renovated Club XIX is Gary Fenimore recently with MacArthur Park in SF...Don't forget the "Masters of Food & Wine" at Highlands Inn April 22-27...St. Marys-by-the-Sea church in Pacific Grove is 100 years old. At that time the total value of the property, building and furnishings was a whopping $9,293 (the lot was donated) plus the $1,350 organ. By 1909 the butterfly capital had a population of 2,022 souls. Among the 83 business firms were two livery stables, two garages, three public halls, a skating rink, moving picture theater, bathing pavilion, Japanese tea garden, museum and public library, the Woman's Civic Club, three hotels (the chief of these being the capacious P.G. Hotel), two banks, seven churches, and the new grammar and high schools just completed at a cost of $40,000. Wow!

Spring flings

By SHARRON DOUGLAS

SPRING IS HERE! Along with the onset of spring come many activities at River School.

Open House was held on Thursday, April 9. Parents were invited to visit their children's classrooms and view the various projects and displays. Underway in the library was the annual Book Fair. The event was enjoyed by the many visitors who attended.

The Carmel Middle School orientation will be held in April and May. Karl Pallastrini and Donna Alonzo will pay a visit to our fifth-grade students to acquaint them with the various programs and activities available at Middle School. This is followed by a fifth-grade visit to Middle School for a guided tour of the campus. These activities help to make the transition from elementary school to Middle School a smooth one.

The traditional May Pole dance begins the gala May Dance Festvial on Friday, May 1. Diane Chatwin, our gifted movement teacher, choreographs this colorful event, with the assistance of Patrick Allan. Each class participates in a movement/dance presentation for the audience to enjoy. Parents are invited to join their children for a picnic lunch following the festival.

April is National Secretaries' Month. During this time, we pause to consider the many services the River School secretaries perform for us. Too innumerable to mention, they range from greeting visitors to applying band-aids and rendering tender loving care to students. Our secretaries, Jean Taylor and Sandy Russak, are key elements in the successful functioning of our school. These gracious, giving ladies are indeed assets to our River School staff. We thank them for all they do for all of us.

Hospice to train volunteers

Phase I of volunteer orientation for Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula will take place 7 to 10 p.m. Tuesday, April 21 at the Hospice inpatient facility on Carmel Valley Road. Phase II will take place 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday, April 25 at Casa Estrada, 450 Tyler St., Monterey.

Orientation helps determine level of interest in volunteering for Hospice, according to Laurette Toldi, volunteer director. An overview of Hospice is given, including a description of Hospice patient care.

Once level of interest is determined, volunteer training follows with sessions scheduled from May 2 through 14. Participants are asked to attend five training sessions.

"We're seeking all types of volunteers, but especially those interested in patient care, either in the home or at the Hospice facility," said Toldi. "We have need for a variety of skills and interests."

For more information, contact Laurette Toldi at 625-0441.

Admission is free to the review, which will begin at 2 p.m. Tuesday, April 21, in the library at the church.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Why do women live an average of eight years longer than men? It's in their genes, according to epidemiologist Deborah Wingard of the University of California. In her survey of 5,000 residents of the San Francisco Bay area, Wingard found that the risk factors or bad habits believed to contribute to early death were more prevalent among women than men. High-risk factors for women included physical inactivity, smoking and few contacts with friends or relatives. Risk factors for men included smoking, alcohol and being unmarried. Her conclusion is that women are more biologically fit than men as a result of immunological and hormonal differences. She writes, "Women have lower death rates in virtually every country, at almost every age and for most causes of death."

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

Straight-shooters

CARMEL ROTARY, LA PLAYA

April 7, 1983 The Carmel Pine Cone/CV Outlook

This week I made a historic decision, long-delayed. I decided to perform an almost liturgical function, that of "spring cleaning." It is an ideal exercise in penance for the preparation of the Passover and the Easter Season.

Not without tears I threw out boxes of magpie or pack-rat treasures. In a corner of my library I found a Spanish manuscript.

"There is a long-forgotton story that relates to Carmel's glory.

It has been hidden in my archives all these years
Tho the parchment is quite dusty
This trusty tale appears."

It is a report on the Mission San Carlos. It was signed by Padre Juan Amoros and dated Feb. 3, 1814. The Padre said San Carlos was, "Llamada Vulgarmente Carmelo."

However, at the Mission, "They gave, lent and borrowed not as strangers, but as brothers." The Padre gave an example of their two languages on the same subject. One began with the word, "muxina" and the other, "egenoch."

The sentence he used said: "Men who are good bowmen are esteemed and well liked." Perhaps this is true today of Carmel Rotarians who are yeomen, straight-shooters, never miss the mark and pull the long-bow with skill.

At this Eastertide may Almighty God grant us the ability to go on hitting the bulls-eye. May we treat our fellow man with the same kindness as "los Puros Indios De Carmelo" of long ago.

OBITUARIES

ELIZABETH KEATINGE

Elizabeth Keatinge

Cremation took place at the Little Chapel-by-the-Sea for Elizabeth Armstrong Keatinge, a renowned Carmel artist and one of the founders of the Carmel Foundation, who died April 12 at the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula. She was 102.

Born March 16, 1885 in Corvalis, Ore., she attended school at St. Helen's Hall, now the Oregon Episcopal School, in Portland, and was the keynote speaker at the school's founder's day activities in November 1982.

She came to Carmel 20 years ago from Berkeley and was a long-standing member of the Carmel Art Association, serving seven terms on the board of directors. She frequently visited the peninsula before moving to Carmel.

She helped found the Carmel Foundation in 1950 and served as director. For years she contributed paintings to the annual auction at Beacon House, an alcoholism rehabilitation center in Pacific Grove.

She had her first one-woman show at the Carmel Foundation in 1975; in 1980 she had a one-woman show at the Carmel Art Association's gallery.

Her watercolors were exhibited at the San Francisco Museum of Art., M.H. de Young Memorial Museum in San Francisco and the Oakland Art Museum. Among her awards, she had a first in the 1966 Berkeley Festival of Arts and the 1968 Carmel Religious Art Annual.

She was honored on her 100th birthday in March 1985 at the Carmel Art Association.

Survivors include a daughter, Elizabeth Ibanez of Los Angeles; two sons, Kenneth G. Keatinge of Carmel, and Gerald R. Keatinge of Aldie, Va.; a sister, Mrs. Fay Armstrong Briggs of Pacific Grove, nine grandchildren, 15 great-grandchildren and two great great-grandchildren. Her husband, Richard Harte Keatinge, died in 1963.

Private memorial services are scheduled for a later date. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements. Memorial contributions are suggested to the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula.

Emily J. Howard

Private services took place for Emily J. Howard of Carmel, who died March 26 in Community Hospital. She was 85.

Born Aug. 3, 1901 in Pawnee City, Neb., she was a resident of the Carmel area for more than 30 years. She last resided in Hacienda Carmel.

She was a member of the Community Hospital Auxiliary, the PEO and the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Survivors include a daughter, Katharine Dixon of Carmel; two sisters, Betty Thompson of Santa Rosa and Florence Miller of Nampa, Idaho; three grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Her husband, Ret. Col. John George Howard, died last year.

The California Cremation Society is in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorial contributions to Community Hospital.

D. Kaye Chandler

Memorial services took place April 4 at St. John's Episcopal Chape, for D. Kaye Chandler of Carmel Valley, a prominent urban planner and landscape architect, whose body was found March 31 near Robinson Canyon Road in Carmel Valley. He was 42.

Born Sept. 30, 1944 in Council Bluffs, Iowa, he lived in Carmel Valley for 13 years. Before moving to Monterey Cuonty, he was a recreational planned in Alberta, Canada, and with HOH and Downing Leach in Colorado.

He had been director of design and planning for Landmark Land Co. of Carmel since 1974, and was directly responsible for planning and design of its Carmel Valley Ranch, La Quinta Hotel and Tennis Resort, PGA West in La Quinta and the Oak Tree Golf and Country Club in Edmond, Okla. He was also involved in the planning for offices and commercial buildings in Oklahoma, Louisiana and Southern California.

He was a member of St. John's Episcopal Chapel and the Association of Landscape Architects.

Survivors include his wife, Vera; two sons, Shawn of Eugene, Ore., and Trafton of Carmel Valley; a brother, Kent of Modale, Iowa; and his parents Delmar and Ruth Chandler of Missouri Valley, Iowa.

Cremation took place at the Monterey City Cemetery with the Mission Mortuary in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the Iowa State University Scholarship Fund, College of Design and Landscape Architecture, Ames, Iowa 50011.

Marcela Z. Fenton

A private family service, followed by burial in Santa Barbara Mission, took place for Marcela Zabala Fenton, a descendent of the early California De La Guerra and Hartnell families, who died Mar. 31 at her Montecito home. She was 83.

Born Sept. 22, 1903 in Salinas, she was the daughter of Pedro Eduardo and Alicia Murray Zabala.

She was the widow of racehorse owner Charles S. Howard and of screen actor-director Leslie C. Fenton. In 1952, she married Fenton, a British actor, director and decorated Royal Navy officer, at Carmel Mission.

During the time they lived in Pebble Beach, they developed the Carmel Plaza shopping center and opened an antique shop. They moved to Montecito, near Santa Barbara, in 1976 and Mr. Fenton died in 1978.

She supported various California historical and ecological organizations, and recently donated a gift of 300 Japanese ivory carvings, known as netsuke, to Hartnell College in Salinas. The college, the first established west of the Mississippi River, was founded by William Edward Petty Hartnell, her great-grandfather.

Survivors include a niece and nephew and several grandnieces and grandnephews.

Hare today...

YOU KNOW Easter is just around the corner when bunnies come hopping out onto the main streets of Carmel. Anna Stene (also on front page of this week's issue) donned bunny costume and took to the streets to hand out treats and cheer to children. The warm, sunny weather also brought out tourists and students on spring break, as was evidenced by the crowds at Devendorf Park sunning themselves and shoppers on the streets. CERTAINLY ROUNDING UP CATTLE by pick-up truck is a commonplace activity at the Berta ranch, and when the ride is downhill and the herd is surrounding the vehicle, it takes skill to make sure all 250 get fed. Lawrence Berta decided by age 13 that he wanted to be a rancher. Now 70, he manages the family property in Carmel Valley, a 2,000 acre cattle ranch.

Rancher's life reflects turn-of-the-century ways

LAWRENCE BERTA remembers when Carmel Valley Village was one large dairy farm, Tularcitos School a one-room school house and roping was the source of weekend entertainment for local cowboys.

Story and photos by Holly McFarland

Still far removed from the pace of everyday life, Berta boasts that he can escape into a turn-of-the-century lifestyle on his 2,000 acres of prime ranchland situated about 20 miles east of Carmel.

A spry 70, Berta has spent more than four decades as a rancher. He roams the hillsides rounding up cattle, weaning cows, branding, mending fences and surviving illness, depression and droughts.

The youngest in a family of 14 brothers and sisters, Berta said he was the "weakest" in the family because of illnesses. Yet, Lawrence manages his family property, the Berta Ranch, alone, while only one other brother, Leo, works as a rancher at the San Carlos Ranch in Carmel Valley.

"By the time I was 13 I had made my mind up that I wanted to be a rancher," said Berta, whose sense of humor and light-hearted philosophy have helped him weather the tough times.

Berta's formula for a long, healthy life is simple: "I do everything in moderation including eating, drinking — and women."

Berta, a confirmed bachelor, quipped: "I could have married, but that's why I lived so long."

Early in his ranching career when he was hospitalized he had wanted to ask one of the nurses to marry him. "Many people said that I missed the boat, I probably did, but she didn't," Berta insisted.

The Carmel Valley rancher enjoys the solitude of a rustic existence. The interior of his ranch house is finished in plain oak furniture and a deerhead Berta shot himself looms out over his living room couch. There is no sign of a television anywhere.

"I'd rather read cattle papers and listen to the radio," Berta explained.

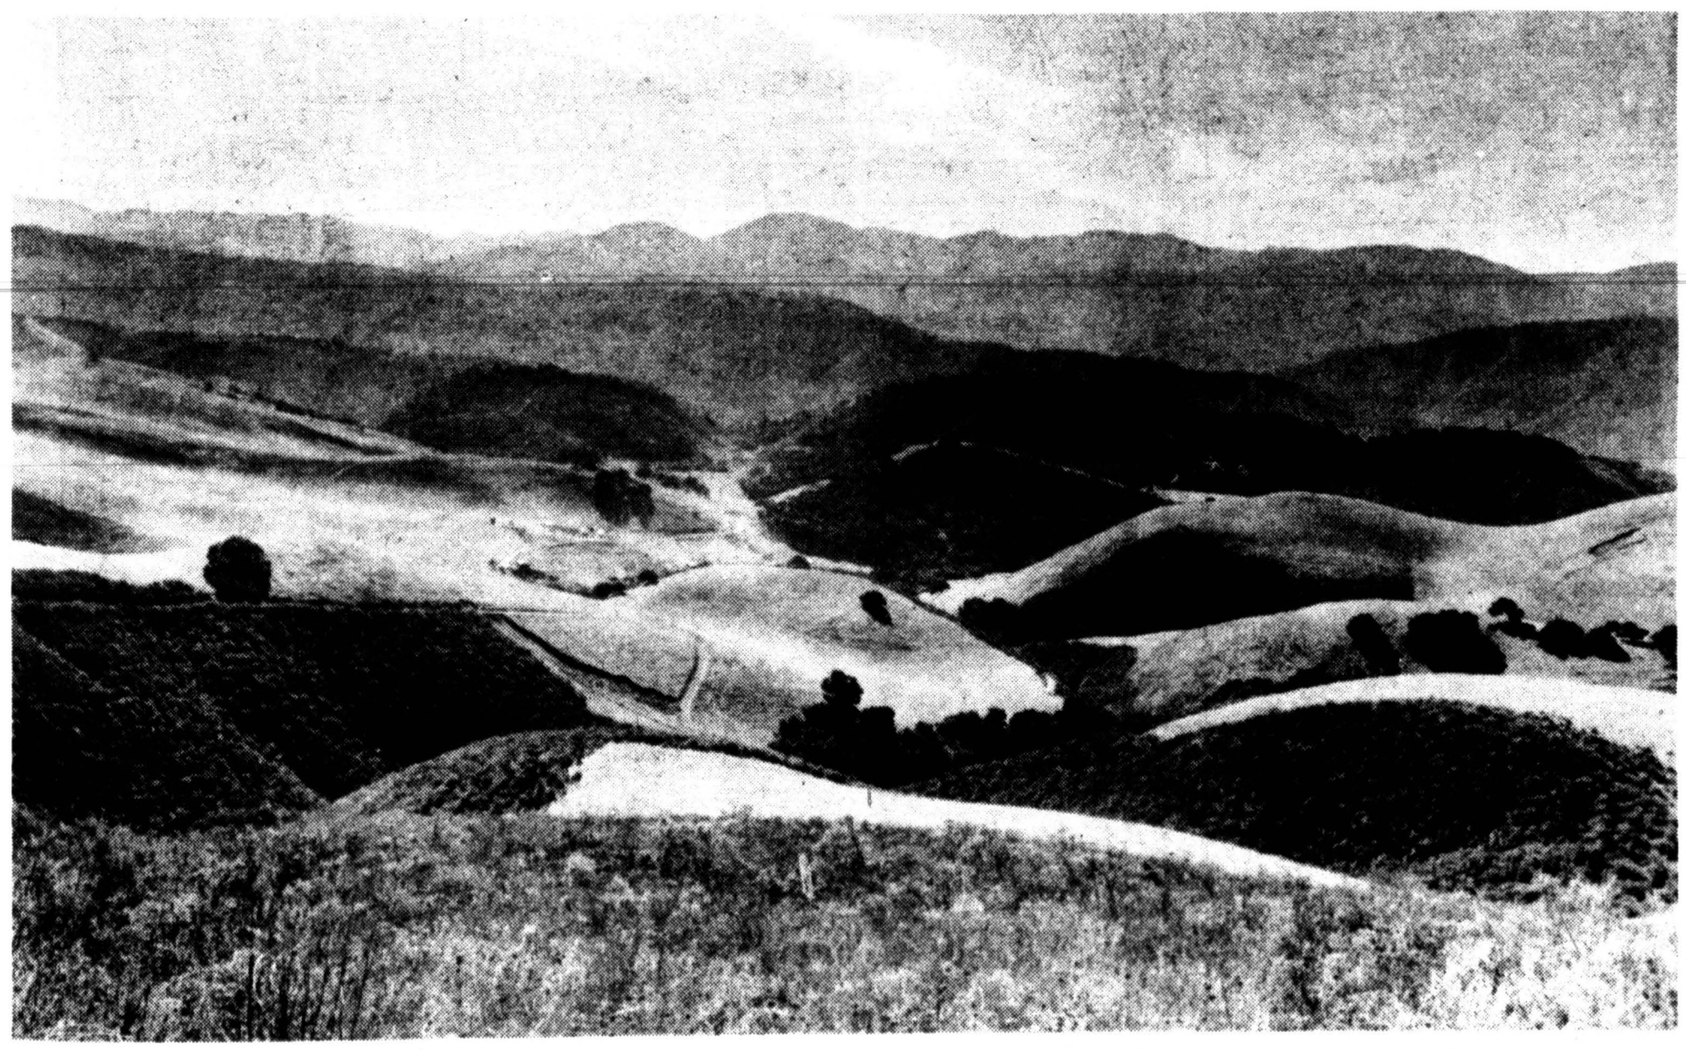
LAWRENCE BERTA sets his cowboy hat on straight as he determines the exact age of his family ranch. Turns out after some figuring that it's a homestead that goes back 100 years.

Berta sees friends on his way to the post office and during an occasional lunch in the Village. "Some people say I should watch out that I could become a hermit, but that's fine with me because I can get along with myself."

At the height of his ranching days Berta left the Carmel Valley for about 20 years to manage a 9,000 acre ranch called "Cienega del Gabilan" or "Ranch of Swamp Hawks" located at Fremont Peak.

•

BERTA COULD write a western novel about his adventures at that ranch, roaming the brush in Bird Creek Canyon, just southeast of Fremont Peak.



TIME STOPS at the northwest point of the Berta Ranch, located just 20 miles east of Carmel. With the Four Star Ranch to the north, Wilson Ranch to the east and south, and Holman Ranch to the west, there is an uninterrupted pastoral view of mountains, valley and ocean. The Berta property encompasses 2,000 acres. Lawrence Berta oversees about 250 head of cattle there.

ARTS & LEISURE

And he had numerous anecdotes on hand to share.

"I was heading back to the ranch at Fremont Peak late one afternoon and a horse I was riding somersaulted on top of me," Berta recalled. "My leg was broken in two places yet I dragged myself up to the road from the canyon and set four fires to get help," Berta said. "Finally, after several hours a scout plane came in and circled all around me as I

MUSIC CORNER

By Jo Ann La Torra

20th century countdown

IN MANY WAYS, the 20th century does exist on the Monterey Peninsula. Late model cars are more in evidence than horses pulling buggies. The educated populace is undoubtedly conversant with contemporary art, reads modern poets and novelists, and avails itself of current technology. However, when it comes to music, the 20th century seems to be in trouble. Considering that there are only 12½ years left of it, that is worrisome.

These musings were triggered during and after the very fine concert given by Carter Brey, cellist, and Barbara Weintraub, pianist, on April 9 under the auspices of the Carmel Music Society.

Brey and Weintraub played a nicely balanced program, although three-fourths of it was not for cello. The only piece orginally for cello was the Suite for Solo Cello, Op. 72, by Benjamin Britten, an effective piece which Brey played brilliantly. However, the coughs and throat clearings sounded like the beginning of a flu epidemic.

The work is representative of the best of Britten's art — lyrical and dramatic, but without the coolness that mars some of his work. There is rhythmic vitality and considerable tonal contrast, especially given that it is played by one bow on four strings. Particularly attractive was the penultimate movement with a drone sounding under splashes of color and rhythm. Although it is not a name I normally would associate with Britten, it had something of Bartok in it.

The duo played two movements by Smetana, "From the Homeland," and the Sonata, Op. 13 by Faure, both originally for violin, transcribed by Brey. The G minor Sonata for bass gamba and harpsichord completed the program.

Brey and Weintraub are both good, solid musicians, and their ensemble is wonderful. The Bach leaned to the Romantic side, and the second movement was so slow it began to lose point. But the outer movements were played with verve and definition. These sonatas are very difficult on cello, as they were conceived for an instrument with six strings tuned mostly in fourths rather than four strings in fifths.

Faure's sprawling sonata suffered a bit by contrast to the economy of the Britten, but it was satisfying on its own terms.

An interesting footnote was supplied by Brey: the 18th century cello he plays was heard in concert here in 1932, undoubtedly long before he was born.

ON FRIDAY EVENING, the Chamber Music Society presented the Cantilena Piano Quartet in a program of late Romantic music. They opened with a movement by Gustav Mahler, written when he was 16. It would be an interesting piece of work in any case; from a 16-year old, it is astonishing. One can hear many traits that would later become identifying marks of this original composer, including his eventual need for a large, colorful sound base.

The Dvorak E flat major Quartet exhibits the strengths and weaknesses of this composer — the tuneful, folksy quality on the plus side, the rambling form on the other.

Another sprawling work of Faure closed this program, the First Piano Quartet. The uncharacteristically witty Scherzo, with its extraordinary variety of sounds, more than offset the dullness of the Adagio. There was the usual lush lyricism, but the last movement took a long time to find its conclusion.

The Cantilena Piano Quartet is a technically brilliant, extroverted group, which brings a lot of life to performance. Some of us might have enjoyed a break from the rich fare, but there was no quarrel with quality.

Monterey County agencies coordinate to halt child abuse

As compared to 1985, there was a 30% increase in the number of reported cases of child abuse in Monterey County for 1986.

April is Child Abuse Prevention Month and the time for the community to focus on this important issue.

Raising children has traditionally been a private family matter. However, due to the growing number of children reportedly abused each year, the public now believes that children have a right to be protected from all harm.

In Monterey County a cooperative effort is being made by the many disciplines involved in treating and preventing child abuse.

Teachers, doctors, babysitters, neighbors and family members are all in positions to observe the abused child. Sometimes, neglect and abuse situations reach child protective agencies only after the damage is done. The earlier a problem is referred for help, the greater the chance of helping the child.

Secondly, get involved with agencies which are dedicated to the prevention and treatment of child abuse.

Finally, advocate for more resources to serve abused children and their families.

To report child abuse on the Monterey Peninsula, call 394-3881.

In all areas after 5 p.m. or on weekends, call 911.

To get involved in the prevention of child abuse, call 394-4662 or Monterey County Department of Social Services, 754-2212.

Jungian principles placed in focus

EVIDENCE — hard scientific fact — is mounting rapidly to prove that the mind/body is one. That is the topic to be examined by the Monterey Peninsula Friends of C.G. Jung at 7 p.m. on Friday, April 17 at All Saints' Church, Ninth and Dolores, Carmel.

An audio-cassette talk by Ernest L. Rossi, Ph.D. titled "Mind/Body Connections and the New Languages of Human Facilitation" will be the featured event. Discussion will follow, together with some illustrations and quotations from Dr. Rossi's book, The Psychobiology of Mind-Body Healing, published by W.W. Norton in 1986.

He goes on to introduce us, in both his talk and the book, to the new world of psychobiology that is making an impact on, and revolutionizing, the current practice of medicine and psychology.

The public is invited to this and all events of the Friends of C.G. Jung. Prior registration is not required nor is a fee; but donations are suggested. Call or write for further information; 649-8809; 853 Pacific St., Monterey.

Oakland Ballet dances new program at Sunset Theater

AN ALL-NEW program will highlight the Wednesday, April 22 performance of the Oakland Ballet at Sunset Theater in Carmel. The dance concert will begin at 8 p.m. at the theater located on San Carlos Street and Ninth Avenue.

The ensemble is scheduled to perform Street Songs, choreographed by Val Caniparoli with music by Carl Orff; Bella di Notte, choreography by Tomm Ruud based upon Prokofiev's Violin Concerto No. 2 in G Minor, Opus 63, Second Movement; Lynchtown, choreography by Charles Weidman, music by Lehman Engel; Daphnis and Chloe Pas de Deux, choreography by Jean Paul Comelin, music by Maurice Ravel; Selections from the Seasons, choreography by Ronn Guidi and Raoul Pause, music by Alexander Glazanov.

One of the West's major professional ballet companies, Oakland Ballet was founded in 1965 by Ronn Guidi. During the past two decades, the company has gained a reputation for its preservation of ballet masterworks from the Diaghilev and early 20th century repertories and the presentation of innovative contemporary choreography.

Under Guidi's direction, the 28-member company has mounted revivals of ballets which otherwise would be lost to audiences of the future. Notable among them are Bronislava Nijinska's Les Biches and Les Noces; Mikhail Fokine's Scheherazade and "Polovtsian Dances" from Prince Igor; Kurt Jooss' The Green Table and Charles Weidman's Lynchtown and Brahms Waltzes.

Tickets to the April 22 performance are $10 and $12.50. For reservations, call 624-3996.

Country-Western team performs

STELLAR COUNTRY artists Bill Grant and Delia Bell, whose musical range includes a full measure of hard country, traditional old time music and riveting bluegrass, will perform in concert at the Cherry Foundation, Friday, April 17 at 8 p.m.

Heralded by pop music critic Bob Claypool as "quite possibly the finest female bluegrass singer alive," Delia Bell has recored more than a dozen albums, including a much-lauded solo record produced by country singer Emmylou Harris.

Together with Bill Grant on mandolin and vocals and Bell on guitar and vocals, the two have performed together throughout the United States and Europe for more than 23 years. Currently, Grant and Bell are touring the West Coast with Claude Godfrey on bass, Dave Vaughn on banjo and fiddler Paul Shelasky.

Known for their sensitivity to the old time music reminisicent of the Dust Bowl and their keen ear for traditional hard country presentation, Grant and Bell reside in Hugo, Okla., where they record on the Rounder label.

Of their "Cheer of the Home Fires" album Patti Fanning of the Boston Globe wrote, "it is a pure country effort by two consummate country performers, a varied disc with gospel, bluegrass, blues and ballads, all sung with exquisite harmony and sincerity. This country as it was meant to be, the unique, lonesome, clear sound of yesteryear—and forever."

Admission is $6 for adults, $4 for students, seniors and the military, and $1 for children.

The Cherry Foundation, a non-profit organization serving the arts, sciences and education, is located at Fourth and Guadalupe, Carmel.

For more information and reservations, call 624-7491.

He has recently completed as extensive recording project of the complete Hungarian Rhapsodies of Liszt, a composer whose major works he has been recording over a 10-year period.

Dichter was born in Shanghai of Polish parents who fled from Nazi persecution and finally settled in Los Angeles. His first lessons in piano started at age 6, continuing later with Aube Tzerko at U.C.L.A. and at Juilliard with Risina Lhevinne. He now resides in New York City with his wife, Cipa, and their two teenage sons.

In his Carmel recital Dichter will perform sonatas by Beethoven and Schumann as well as Fifteen Hungarian Peasant Songs and three Hungarian Rhapsodies by Franz List. A rancher's work is never done

But instead of getting immediate help, Berta said he was sprayed with chemicals by the plane. Three hours later a forest service ranger on foot spotted Berta. Close to midnight that evening he arrived at a nearby hospital.

"It was an act of God because I rode a lot of rough county and that day I happened to bring a pack of matches, otherwise I might have died in Bird Creek Canyon that night," he said.

Berta admitted that life is easier at his Carmel Valley ranch because he doesn't start his chores at dawn anymore. His cattle at 250 head are easily managed.

Yet the Carmel Valley rancher still leads a rugged life by most standards. One of his routine working days involves scouring the hilly terrain up a vertical three-mile incline in his four wheel drive pick-up to round up the cattle for feeding.

Besides honking every so often, Berta has a natural touch at getting the herd's attention by yelling "Hey bossy" every so often out of his truck window. Once they spot the hay on the back of his pick-up their destination becomes obvious.

Like a juggling act Berta bails hay from the back of his pick-up while it rolls down the slopes at a gentle 5 m.p.h. From time to time he slides back into the driver's seat to break for the remaining stragglers.

Quite recently, on his way back to his ranch from the mountain tops, Berta discovered a broken fence his bull had destroyed. Like clockwork, Berta untangled yards of ripped barbed wire fence with his bare hands and dug a seven-foot hole to hammer in a fence post.

"Getting your hands cut is all part of ranching, it's not all rodeos and horseback," Berta said.

By sundown his feet and hands were numb from mending fences.

After finishing the last chore of the day Berta summed up his thoughts about ranching activities.

UNSNARLING barbed wire pieces is all part of ranching. Although not glamorous, it is a necessary activity when a bull destroys fences to get to freedom. (Holly McFarland photo).

"People tell me I'm going to go to hell because I've had such a heaven on earth,' he laughed.

ART NOTES

By Sam Colburn

Visitors from space

OVER A PERIOD of many thousands of years the grinding of two of the earth's great plates against one another has produced in this area what is perhaps the greatest meeting of land and sea in the world. Artists started coming here around the turn of the century. At that time their activity was centered on the Monterey side, and there was a gallery in the Hotel Del Monte. Later on it shifted to Carmel, and resulted in establishment of the Carmel Art Association. The artists, many of them, had been well known in other places, and they had close ties with the East. I can remember when members of the Carmel Art Association sent a group show to the Grand Central Galleries in New York City. This has not happened again although many local artists do individually exhibit in other places. Over the years Carmel has become an island in art. This is not at all surprising as the great art centers are in big cities. At one time big names did come here to offer workshops or to lecture. The first one that I can remember was the sculptor Archipenko, who gave a talk at the Carmel Art Association. He had a strong accent, and closed his lecture by saying, "Man is kweeative, insect is kweeative, kweeation is ooniversal."

The second, in my memory, was Fernand Leger. He gave a workshop at the Carmel Art Institute, which is run by John Cunningham, and at that time was located across from the Pine Inn in a large room which had been spared in the fire which destroyed the beautiful Golden Bough Theatre. He was accompanied by his translator, an attracitve creature by the name of Madam Roux.

Another visitor from outer space was Salvator Dali who had been lured here by Sam Morse. He stayed quite a while, and painted the entire ceiling of the Bali Room, in the Hotel Del Monte, for the annual Artists' Ball.

Our isolation has been lessened by the Crispo Series. We have been able to hear lecturers brought here under the auspices of the Monterey Peninsula Art Foundation. Among those who have appeared are Nathan Oliviera, famous artist from San Francisco, Charles Miedzinski, writer currently involved in the revisioning of art criticism, and Fred Martin, Dean of the San Francisco Art Institute for over 30 years. He spoke about the artist's relationship to the spiritual decay of society, and appeared this past Saturday at the Pacific Grove Art Center.

•

WHEN I VISITED the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, the new exhibit in the main gallery was not open yet. I did see "Del Monte Revisited," and the mixed media show of works by Cheryl Calleri. There are some fine paintings in the first mentioned. I had never seen the work of Xavier Martinez, nor, as a matter of fact that of Will Sparks or of William Keith. They all enjoyed a fluid handling of oil paint. William Keith was one of the first artists to come here, and his "Twilight" shows how good he was. Xavier Martinez would not come here to live, but his "Monterey Landscape" is a fine, small painting. So is Will Sparks' "Adobe." These three works rely on simple masses, and great texture. Mary De Neale Morgan was a prolific painter. I like her "Cypress and Sea." The work of Cheryl Calleri is called mixed media collage. The area in which she works is often quite small. The effect of depth is achieved through the use of different planes. All the pieces are intimate and personal. "To be Silent" has a unity achieved through the use of different darks. "Standing Alone" has a fine, moody feeling. The large pieces do not seem to "hold" as well as the smaller. The whole show is superbly worked. These collages are complex, and show what can be done to intrigue the eye in a small space.

THE PACIFIC GROVE Art Center continues to find artists who are not well known whose work deserves to be seen. In this case it is Vanessa Stafford, a self-styled visualist painter. Some of her watercolors are straightforward city scenes, but the others are surreal in that there is an illogical association of subject matter. One is a marvelous snow scene which incorporates a ballet on ice skates flanked by two figures on skies. One feels a dreamlike quality in these pictures. Parts of the human body are exaggerated. There is a winged lion with a human head. Of course such phantasies are not by themselves unusual. The trick is to achieve the thing called Form.

Actually the whole exhibit at the center is built around "Signs as Art." I will not be so foolish as to try and define art. In sign painting you want a succinct impact. You want to get the message across about a business. Sometimes you have to shout. The techniques for doing this are, in these days, almost inexhaustible. Many are shown in this exhibit. One sign advertises a religion, one does the same for the Cambridge Diet. The latter has a long message to impart. The poster advertising the South Dakota National Monument is, I believe, a silk screen work. There is a varied visual impact to the show as a whole. It is sort of like a strung out collage.

•

AS I HAVE said before, I do not know of any artist who has the command over his medium as does Barclay Ferguson. At present in the galleries of the Carmel Art Association you may see his nine concepts of a water tank which is located in Moss Landing. These are paintings in acrylic. My concern about Barclay is that I don't know where he is. His vitality and range is terrific. You can see a constant imagery in the works of most artists, but not with him. I think his paintings of toys, and of toy soldiers storming the beach in Carmel established a direction, but he seems seduced by his own virtuosity, and who is not?

The Big Sky

As you mount up Outlook Drive, swing right on Pine Hills, and continue to climb, your expectations begin to soar. And you will not be disappointed. Just as you round a tight curve near the top, there it is, a dramatic assembly of squares and angles high above the roadway.

The house is earth-colored, stucco on the upper stories, board and batten on ground level. The trim is black with a fine white line tracing the frames. The roof is heavy shingles.

A wide staircase brings you up to the entrance, a simple panelled door that opens to a high entrance hall with a modern chandelier and a great picture window looking south. The floor is foot-square Mexican tiles, a motif that continues up the stair to the right, past the living room, dining room and into the kitchen and family room. Tiles also provide low benches around the fireplaces in living and family rooms.

The kitchen and family area provides an expanse of 33 x 18, broken only by an island cooking center and a waist-high counter. Counter tops are pure white tile, punctuated here and there by Delft blue art tiles. The appliances, all in place, are top of the line.

A number of general comments apply to all rooms. All are finished in white plaster. All are lighted from small fixtures recessed in the ceilings. All plumbing fixtures — in the kitchen, the 8 x 8 laundry and 3 baths — are gold. All light switches are the silent, Mercury type.

The views from this aerie, framed by picture windows and glass doors, are incredible: Point Lobos (both sides) and the Carmel River to the south; green meadows, fairways and mountains slightly east; the Valley; and, of course, the Pacific.

All 4 bedrooms are large, ranging from 13 x 16 to 18 x 14. The master suite is on the main level, with enormous vistas, a skylighted bath, and a wall of mirrors on the closet doors. The bath includes a scenic tub with Jacuzzi jets, glassed-in shower, 2 huge closets and lots of dressing space. A second bedroom and bath on this level is only slightly less grand.

There are 2 more bedrooms and a bath on the lower level, both with the mirrored wall and the limitless views. This is a genuinely beautiful house, finished with great care and taste, and in a marvelous setting at 25220 Pine Hills Drive. And inspiring as the views are, you will find yourself looking up at the great vault of the sky. Even Montana, The Big Sky Country, has nothing to match this!

It's new. It's 3300 sq. ft. It's $498,000.

CARMEL LEGENDS

No. 12

On the afternoon of February 12, 1935, the great dirigible USS MACON, pride of the U.S. Navy, moved slowly and steadily up the California coast, returning from maneuvers to the great hangar at Moffat Field. She was 784 feet long, 133 feet high, looked like a 50-story building floating through the air, and sounded like the switch yards in Omaha, Nebraska. Her chief officer, Lt. Commander Herbert V. Wiley, commanded a crew of 83. She had eight 12-cylinder, 500 HP engines ranged along her sides, and she paid little attention to the massive thunderheads gathering out at sea. Suddenly, at precisely 5:05 P.M., the storm struck with incredible force. The engines beat violently, the crew worked feverishly, but she was like a bull in a tea shop, plunging, bucking, fighting for survival. In 20 minutes she was driven into the sea 3 miles off Big Sur, where she split like a melon and sank. 81 of the crew of 83 were rescued by Navy vessels in the area and by residents of Big Sur. But the Navy's dream of lighter-than-air dreadnaughts died that afternoon at 1820 hours.

Peninsula a favored place for Sunday brunchers

It's not without reason that brunch has become such a popular pastime on the Monterey Peninsula. Many of the area's finest restaurants boast patios for outdoor dining and striking views of Monterey Bay that can only be enjoyed fully during the day.

The Spyglass at La Playa in La Playa Hotel, Camino Real at Eighth, Carmel, serves Sunday brunch from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Begin with a buffet of fresh juice, fresh fruit, mini-bagels, whipped salmon mousse, cheeses and the chef's own pastries.

Entrees are then served at your table. Some of the specialties include puffed fruit pancakes, frittatas or egg entrees. Brunch is priced from $9.50 to $14.25 per person and may be enjoyed in the Ocean-View Poseidon Room and adjoining terrace. Call 624-4010.

Enjoy Sunday brunch overlooking the lovely courtyard at Anton & Michel, on Mission between Ocean and Seventh in Carmel. A complete brunch with a set menu is $11.50 and begins with choice of fresh orange juice, champagne, ramos fizz, mimosa, kir royale, or bloody Mary; fresh fruit cocktail followed by choice of eggs Benedict or Nova Scotia, Spanish omelette, seafood crepes, fettuccine Monterey, avocado shrimp boat, quiche maison, lobster quenelles, fried calamari or chicken chasseur; croissants, butter, jam and marmalade. Coffee, Sanka or tea included. Brunch begins at 10 a.m. and is served until 2 p.m. Call 624-2406.

All you can eat is the rule during the champagne brunch buffet at Surdi's, 2030 Fremont St., Monterey. The feast is served 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. It includes an eight-ounce glass of champagne or orange juice and features a salad bar with more than 25 selections including bay shrimp, pasta salad, fresh fruits, cold meats and cheeses.

Hot buffet specialties offer several main entrees plus fried shrimp, eggs Florentine, quiche Lorraine, baked ham and pizza. To top it off, visit the "all you can eat" dessert buffet with pastries, eclairs and cakes. All of the above costs $8.95; children under 12, $5.45. While there, visit the new cocktail lounge. Call 646-0100.

An assortment of three-egg omelettes, from simple to crab and cheese-bedecked, can be ordered from 11 a.m. on at Bullwacker's, 653 Cannery Row in Monterey. Bullwacker's also features private dining rooms for group lunches, banquets and dinners. Call 373-1353.

Welcome to Pacific Grove's Pt. Pinos Lighthouse

Point Pinos is the oldest continuously operating lighthouse on the west coast. Since February 1, 1855, its beacon has flashed nightly as a guide and warning to shipping off the rocky California coast.

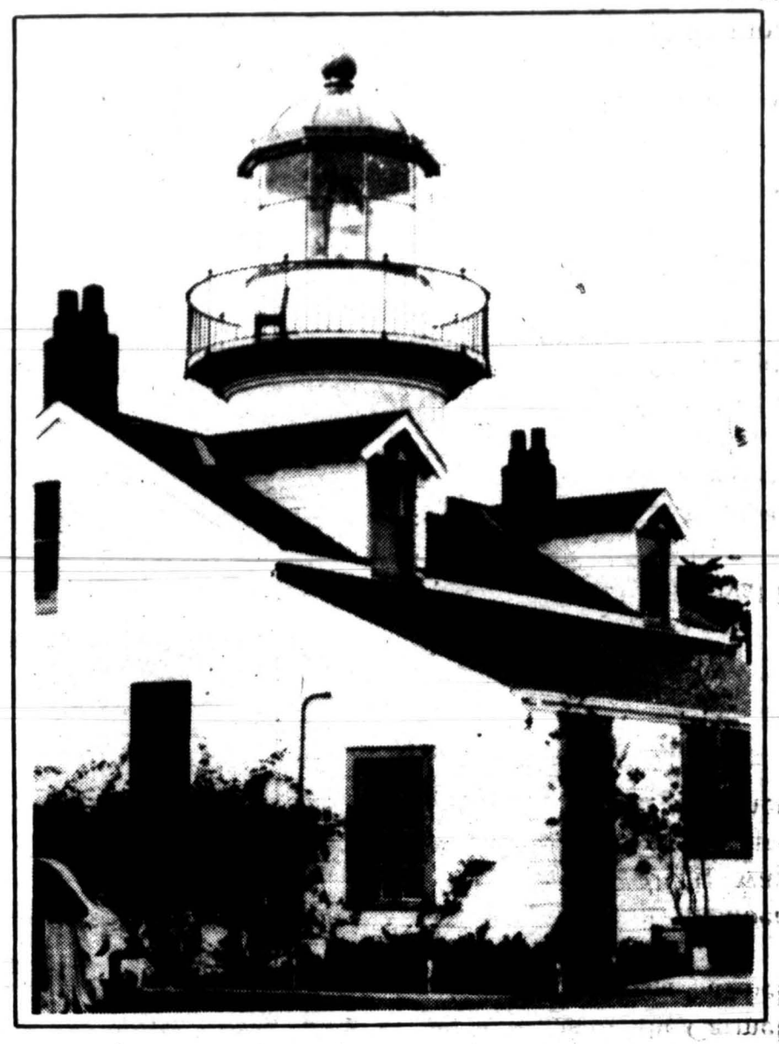
The light is a third order Fresnel (catodioptric) with lenses, prisms and mechanism manufactured in France in 1853. A larger, second order light had been planned but delay in shipment caused the present light to be substituted. The first light source was a sperm oil lantern in which the oil was forced up from a tank by a gravity-operated piston. A falling weight mechanism rotated a metal shutter around the light causing the beam to be cut off to seaward 10 out of every 30 seconds. This mechanism is still in place and could be used in case of a power failure. Lard oil soon replaced sperm oil and in turn was replaced by kerosene in 1880. At the turn of the century the incandescent vapor lamp was used, followed by electricity in 1915.

The present light source, located 89 feet above sea level, is a 1,000 watt bulb that, amplified by the lenses and prisms, produces a 50,000 candlepower beam visible under favorable conditions up to 15 miles at sea. Formerly the light had the rigid schedule of being lit one hour prior to sunset and extinguished one hour after sunrise. With automation completed on May 27, 1975, a small backup light was installed outside the tower and the main light was turned on permanently as you see it today. The present signal is a simple on-off arrangement.

As a further navigational aid, a Class D radio beacon operates continuously on a 290 kilocycle frequency, on for 14 seconds, off 1 second, with a range of 10 to 20 miles. A foghorn located several hundred yards from the station nearer the shore consists of two electric Tyfons diaphragm units. It was formerly turned on manually by Coast Guard personnel when lack of visibility warranted. It too is now automated.

Point Pinos was named by the Spanish explorer Sebastian Vizcaino in 1602. The name translates to "the Point of Pines." In 1734 the Spanish admiral Gonzales reported the Punto de Pinos, the southern headland of Monterey Bay, as a point heavily wooded to the shoreline. The Franciscan missionaries are believed to have walked here from their camp near Carmel in 1769. Their records make reference to a pond which is considered to be Crespi Pond on the reservation. The point was part of a large land grant of 2,666 acres, made by Mexico to Jose Maria Armenta in 1833 and which was later confirmed by the U.S. government to Henry De Gaw in 1868. In 1852 the government purchased 25 acres for the light site. Later the Pacific Improvement Company having purchased some of the adjacent land from David Jacks sold an additional 67 acres to the Lighthouse Service.

In 1850 Congress appropriated funds for the construction of lighthouses on the west coast and in 1852 the Secretary of the Treasury ordered the building of eight beacons, one of which was to be at Point Pinos. In March 1853 the bark Oriole was sent from San Francisco with men and materials. Construction started but difficulty with delivery of the lenses and prisms from France delayed the opening of the light until 1855.



THE POINT PINOS LIGHTHOUSE on Asilomar Boulevard in Pacific Grove rests on the northernmost tip of the Monterey Peninsula and has operated continuously since 1855, longer than any lighthouse on the West coast.

The first keeper was Charles Layton, appointed to the post at $1,000 per year. Layton was killed in 1855 by a member of a sheriff's posse chasing the notorious outlaw Anastacio Garcia. He was succeeded by his widow Charlotte, who in 1860 married the third keeper George Harris. Robert Louis Stevenson wrote of visiting the keeper Allen Luce in 1879 after a walk through the woods from Monterey and praised Luce's hospitality, piano playing, ship models and oil paintings.
